

LORD ROBERTS, BRITAIN'S GREAT SOLDIER, DIES

One of Greatest Military Men of Modern Times Passes
Away in France

WORLD SHOCKED BY NEWS

Known as "Bobs" to Soldiers, and Favorite With Men in the Ranks

LONDON, Nov. 15.—(Sunday)—Field Marshal Earl Roberts died last night in France from pneumonia. A telegram from Field Marshal Sir John French, commander of the British expeditionary forces on the continent, apprised Earl Kitchener, secretary of state for war, of the death of England's great soldier. The telegram read:

"I deeply regret to tell you that Lord Roberts died at 8 o'clock this (Saturday) evening."

Field Marshal Roberts, who was colonel-in-chief of the Indian troops, had gone to France to give them his cheering. Soon after his arrival he became seriously ill with pneumonia and a severe chill on Thursday and pneumonia rapidly developed. His great age, 82 years, militated against his recovery, the crisis in the disease coming quickly.

World Shocked by Death.

The news of the death of Lord Roberts came as an entire surprise to England. The veteran's devotion to the interests of the army, his hard work in this connection and his amazing good health had been the subject of comment since the beginning of the war. He was the most popular military figure in Great Britain, and a national hero without a rival in the annals of the people.

He had never been ill, and his health was as good as that of a young man. He was a man of great energy and a man of great courage. He was a man of great courage and a man of great energy.

Lord Roberts' Service.

Lord Roberts was born in 1832. He was a man of great energy and a man of great courage. He was a man of great courage and a man of great energy. He was a man of great courage and a man of great energy.

Popular With Soldiers.

Lord Roberts commanded none of the arts of the orator, and usually read his speeches. His popular nickname, "Bobs," implied no lack of personal dignity. Although only five feet, three inches, he was a man of great energy and a man of great courage.

Had Notable Career.

"Roberts of Kandahar, Pretoria and Waterford," as Field Marshal Lord Roberts was known, was known as a soldier whose death has plunged the empire into mourning.

Field Marshal Roberts worked day and night for the welfare of the soldiers from the outbreak of the war.

The government, it is said, will offer a tomb in Westminster Abbey or St. Paul's for the empire's foremost soldier.

PRES. WILSON IS BIG ATTRACTION ON BROADWAY

Breaks Up Street Meetings by Crowd Following Him
About City

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—President Wilson's visit to New York, when he stops at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, has become a big attraction on Broadway.

Discovered at Last!

It's Wilson! It's President Wilson! shouting the discoverer.

Instantly the Salvationists were deserted, as the listeners began to follow the president and his host.

Two blocks farther on a volunteer street organ, displaying the Mexican situation, gained the nation's chief executive as an auditor.

The organ soon was deserted, the throng trailing the president.

The next stop in the Wilson itinerary was a suffrage meeting.

The speaker, a woman, was interrupted by the president and his host.

Two or three New York Salvationists volunteered to assist the secret service in finding a path for the president's distinguished visitor.

The suggestion was made that they should follow the president and his host.

ROAD TO CALAIS BLOCKED BY FOREST OF BAYONETS; BATTLE RAGING 4 WEEKS

Thousands of Lives Are Sacrificed Without Any Great Gains Being Made by Either Side in Big Conflict

Germans Resume Offensive Tactics Along the Entire Line, but Onslaughts Ineffective;
Russians Continue Enveloping Movement
Against Germans in East Prussia

PARIS, Nov. 14.—All the attempts of the Germans to reach Calais have been frustrated by the forest of bayonets presented by the allied French, Belgian and British troops.

The attacks by the Germans have been carried out in a futile, Ypres and Arras with heavy losses on the part of the Germans. Some bayonets in the neighborhood of Dixmude which have been taken and broken three or four times, are now in the hands of the allies, who are strongly situated on the canal, the crossing of which would be of great importance to the Germans.

It is officially announced that two German regimental flags found in trenches formerly occupied by the Germans on the Marne have been handed to Field Marshal Sir John French by General Joffre, as they were discovered opposite the position then held by the British.

BATTLE HAS BEEN IN PROGRESS FOUR WEEKS

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The battle of West Flanders, which was brought about by the German attempt to advance to Dunkirk and Calais on the northern coast of France, commenced just four weeks ago today, and desperate fighting and the sacrifice of thousands of lives the two armies held virtually the same position.

After taking Antwerp and the German forces proceeded with little or no opposition as far as Nieuport on the Yser canal. There they found against them the Belgian army.

SCURVY THREATENS TO DESTROY MEXICAN ARMY

REBACA, Calif., Nov. 14. Scurvy threatens to do almost as much harm to the soldiers of the Naco, Honduras, army as the attacks of Maximo G. Gomez according to reports received here.

About 25 cases of the disease are reported under the care of a physician at Hill's hospital in Naco. Lack of vegetable food, it is said, will hinder the work of eradicating the disease.

RIC EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

TAKE CARE AT FIRST SIGN OF URINARY IRRITATION OR
BACKACHE

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out. If they are weak or overworked, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night, if you suffer with backache, or dizziness, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure you; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

FOREIGN SERVICE TO BE IMPROVED

BILL PROPOSES MANY CHANGES

Would Prevent Emergencies in Diplomatic Relations With World Powers

By SIDNEY ESPEY.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—When a Senate bill for the improvement of the foreign service of the United States is passed by the house, it is the next session of Congress as unduly it will be, a number of the ideas of the president and Secretary of State Bryan for the betterment of the service will go into effect. This measure was passed by the Senate at the latest session of Mr. Bryan just before the close of the first session.

The measure provides for the appointment by the president, with the approval of the Senate, of secretaries in the diplomatic service and consular service, general in the consular service to certain grades rather than to individual posts. Assignments to posts and transfers from one post to another within a grade are to be left to the president. The object of this proposal is to introduce elasticity into the foreign service so that when emergencies arise, as they have since the war in Europe broke out, demanding at certain posts the presence temporarily of additional experienced officers, the president will be able to transfer to those posts secretaries or consular officers who are not so urgently needed elsewhere.

Will Improve Service.

In the past all of the appointments and transfers to various individual posts have been sent by the president to the Senate for confirmation, causing unnecessary delay. Secretary Bryan also urged upon Congress in support of this plan the fact that under it the president will be able to adjust to the two services the changing conditions in the commercial relations of this country with other countries and to change the assignments of the various officers so that they will be able to render the maximum of efficient service.

The bill passed by the Senate also provides for a slight increase in the salaries of the diplomatic consular officers. Secretaries in the diplomatic service are to be graded in five classes, at salaries ranging from $1,000 to $2,000 a year, consuls general are to be graded in five classes at salaries ranging from $4,000 to $12,000, and consuls in nine classes at salaries ranging from $2,000 to $8,000. The entire increased appropriation on this account however will not exceed $200,000 it is estimated.

Emergencies Caused by War.

The changes urged by Secretary Bryan also provide that an officer may be given special detail outside of his regular post in order that he may have an opportunity to interchange ideas and opinions with the business men of this country.

Until this bill can become a law, the State department is meeting the extraordinary situation in Europe as best it can. In London for instance, the American ambassador must care for the German and Austrian interests through a British official, and in Berlin the American ambassador must care for the French and British interests.

The bill passed by the Senate makes a provision which is considered very important. It gives the president the power of embassy in the absence of the ambassador, and a secretary is to be nominated large difference in the service and in the case of a regular officer designated to care for the duties of their respective posts to which they are assigned.

Improvement in Post.

There have been many plans to better the consular and diplomatic service of the United States in past years. The Republican administration did much to improve the service and to make promotions in the service depend upon merit. But when the Democratic administration took charge of course, the "rule hunters" turned their eyes with eagerness upon the diplomatic and consular jobs and as fast as possible the Republicans have been eliminated and Democrats substituted.

This course is bound to be taken as long as the foreign service is at the mercy of the party in power. Strong efforts will be made in the future, however, to make the service more permanent as to personnel, with the idea that a man may enter at the lowest position and work up to the highest post on merit. This plan is regarded not only as fairer to the man in the service but also as of infinitely more value to the United States, which would have a corps of trained diplomats in the service.

the following comment on the operations on the Russian front:

"The Russian eastern army will conduct the home defense from two bases. They are organizing their northern forces at Thorn, using the back railroads to maintain communication with their East Prussian army. The new southern base is Oppeln, on the Oder 50 miles southeast of Breslau.

"A quantity of guns are being brought up from Tarnobrzeg and the latter place evidently is to be abandoned to the Austrian garrison.

to know about the war and appeal to their sentiment and their imagination, or a very speedy resort to compulsory service will become inevitable.

The Pall Mall Gazette, urges the government to take whatever steps are necessary, and says:

"The men must be got and got with out delay, and the present record of default which mocks our national sincerity must be brought to an end."

Sweden's Enthusiasm for War as Ally of Germany Has Waned

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Nov. 14.—Sweden's enthusiasm for war as an ally of Germany, which was marked two months ago, has waned. Today all the desire is to be left out of the conflict. Recent efforts by the government to enlist Sweden's active and have fallen on deaf ears. Through emissaries, the suggestion has been advanced of a greater Sweden as a condition of the Baltic states, including Finland, but with Sweden as the central power, Sweden's reply was in substance that she was not ambitious in that direction.

SENATOR NEWLANDS WAS REELECTED BY 33 VOTES

CARSON, Nev., Nov. 14.—Francis G. Newlands, Democrat, was re-elected United States senator on November 3, after Samuel Platt, Republican, by a plurality of 33 votes, according to the result of the official canvass, which was completed today.

WAR NOW IS PASSION WITH THE RUSSIANS

Life of Nation Is Streaming Into Army; Fighting Blood of People Aroused

LONDON, Nov. 14.—In a lengthy review of the earlier operations on the battlefield of Russian Poland and Galicia, Prof. Bernard Pares, the British official correspondent with the Russian army, gives a sketch of the spirit which he says pervades the Russian army. After referring to the confidence of the Russians in their artillery, and their lack of respect for the rifle fire of their opponents, Professor Pares continues:

"But the most impressive thing of all is the extraordinary endurance of the men in the trenches. It is an extraordinary experience for a man to be from five to eight days in pouring rain, almost or sometimes altogether without food, and then perhaps to rush on the enemy, to fall and see half of his comrades fall, but the rest still going forward."

"The spirit of the Russian army draws everything to it so that no one seems to feel he is living unless he is getting to the front. All the little comforts are shared simply, as among brothers."

Life Streaming Into War.

"All the life of Russia is streaming into the war, and never was the Russian people more virile than now in the Russian army."

Contrary to the general idea, Professor Pares says that the cavalry played but an insignificant part in the fighting in Galicia. He says the Russian troops in the Austrian army were in a very difficult position. In several cases they fired into the air and the attacking Russians, sometimes did the same, when upon, he says, numbers of the Russians, who considered themselves at home in the part of Galicia. The Russian, who were preceding the army, offered little violence in this field, says Professor Pares, though some times they were led to adopt drastic, but not necessarily violent, measures in dealing with certain hostile inhabitants of the district.

DENVER HAS BANK ACCOUNT OF $4,510,350 FOR 1915

DENVER, Nov. 14.—Revised estimates presented to the city council today place the total cost of running the city government, courts, schools, parks and subsidiary commissions in 1915 at $4,510,350.

FISH LIVE THOUGH FROZEN

A Swiss scientist has demonstrated that a fish may be frozen into a solid block of ice, remain there for a considerable period, and still survive. He recently placed 25 fish in water rich in oxygen and which was kept cold by the presence of cakes of ice floating therein. They were kept thus for about 18 hours. The temperature was then reduced very slowly until the water was frozen. This cake of ice was kept for two months and then thawed as gradually as it was frozen. The fish were all found to be alive.

Efforts are now being made to apply this discovery commercially, and methods of keeping and transporting fish in cold storage may be revolutionized. Pares believes a salmon from Alaska in a cake of ice, and then thawing him out carefully and having him alive.

CHICAGO STOCK YARDS READY FOR REOPENING

No Danger of Food Contamination, Says Dr. Neil, Government Meat Inspector

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Complete disinfection of the Chicago stock yards, made necessary by the foot and mouth disease was finished today and everything is in readiness for the reopening of the institution at midnight tomorrow.

Dr. W. N. Neil, chief of the federal government's bureau of meat inspection, issued a statement declaring that the public need feel no apprehension of the meat sent out.

"There is no chance for the public to get meat that has been exposed to contamination," said Dr. Neil, "because of the rigid supervision exercised by the government."

A. G. Leonard, president of the Union Stock yards and Transit company, said: "I expect a fairly good run of cattle the opening day. The farmers have been notified to ship stock to be scaled here for immediate slaughter, only. There will be no transshipment of cattle from here and no stock from infected districts will be received."

AMERICAN MINISTER TO NETHERLANDS RETURNING

A TOWN BUILT ON LEDGES

From the November Wide World Magazine

A few miles north of Marseilles, and within easy walk of the train to Aix-en-Provence, lies a typical Provencal village that tourists usually miss. It was founded by the Romans during their domination of the south of France, and is built in accordance with the custom of that time. The houses appear to be perched on top of each other, but on closer inspection are found to be built on ledges on a hillside. This hill is the most interesting feature of the place. What appears as a solitary crag is in reality a castle, the ruins, fortifications, etc., being cut out of the solid rock and forming a fortress practically impregnable in those days. At the side of the castle is a round tower about 40 feet in height and seven feet in diameter. The interior of this tower, acted as the "wine cellar" in Roman times. It consisted of a series of pigeon-holes from which the birds, bearing messages, were sent direct to Rome. The whole of the interior was constructed of a very hard cement, which with the wear of ages, is now slowly decaying, and only one perfect "loft" now remains. There was accommodation for about 250 pairs of birds together with an abundant water and grain supply. The attendants being quartered in the castle.

THE COWS THAT LAID OUT LOWER NEW YORK

In the November American magazine, John A. Moros, the well-known New York newspaper man, writes a fiction story about the New York fire department. "Cinders is a wonderful, unexplored territory to the department," he writes. "The following paragraph Mr. Moros mentions the cows that laid out lower New York."

"Our engine house in south of Division street and just east of Park Row, where the streets are chopped up like a patch of corn, some cow in the days of the Dutch wandered around the lower south of Canal and made a path that later turned out to be the 'Pony' street."

VILLA FACTION WILL OPPOSE EVACUATION OF VERA CRUZ; FORESEE CARRANZA CONTROL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—While awaiting official confirmation of the report from Mexico that a truce had been arranged by leaders of the Carranza and Aguascalientes elements to control of the central government, the Washington government allowed its order to General Funston to stand tonight and Vera Cruz will be returned to Mexican control on November 23 unless some radical change in the situation there prevails. The American expeditionary force at Vera Cruz will embark on that date for Gulf Coast and the Mexican factions will be left to work out their own destiny, the policy of watchful waiting having been altered in no respect.

State department officials looked upon the reported truce, however, as a hopeful sign. They believed that if the leaders had been able to bring about a truce, it would be a long time before it could be extended for a long period to permit the Aguascalientes convention to carry out its avowed purpose and arrange for the election of a provisional president to succeed General Guiterrez, nominated as presidential interim.

No One Recognized.
Although Secretary Bryan declined to say today to whom General Funston would surrender, study of Vera Cruz, it is believed, his instructions are to turn the city over to whatever de facto authorities appear to receive it. It is not the intention of the Washington government to recognize any faction in Mexico through this transfer. As Aguilar May Take City.

Should an official appointed by the Aguascalientes convention chiefs appear, however, with sufficient control of the surrounding territory to warrant his claim, the transfer will be made to him. In other words General Funston will hand over Vera Cruz to the man who presents himself with the means to receive and protect it, no matter which faction he may represent.

Although orders had been sent to General Funston to allow Mexican priests and nuns to sail from Vera Cruz on the transport San Marcos, it was not known definitely today whether they had left or not. The San Marcos might have left port, it was said, before General Funston received the instructions.

It is understood 49 nuns and 11 priests have been living disguised in Vera Cruz for some time past, accepting places as servants and laborers to avoid falling into the hands of the Constitutionals.

Consul General Stillman is believed to have followed General Carranza from Mexico City to Carobola, where the first chief has taken up his temporary headquarters. The state department had no word today from him and knows nothing officially of what is going on in Mexico City.

BELGIANS GREEN FOOD BARGES AS GOD-SENT SHIPS

conduct from the German authorities permitting him to go to Brussels and return unmolested to Holland.

"Accompanied by M. M. Langhorne, secretary of the American legation in Brussels, and Mr. Weman, an American resident, in an automobile, I followed this odd flotilla of men, as it threaded its way from canal to canal and up lock to lock. At Hamme, a town on the Belgian-Dutch frontier, I anticipated some difficulties as to this first consignment of relief. On the contrary, the German officials were fully informed, and there was no delay whatever."

Can't Believe Own Eyes.
"Thence to Brussels the German arrangements for getting our cargo through expeditiously were perfect."

"The sealed hatches of the barges were never opened. The country people came running to the banks of the canal, where they stared at our flotilla as if it were a miracle. For a week not a single barge had passed where formerly they were 1,500 an hour."

"To the Belgian country folk it was at first just a God-sent dream to remind them of the peaceful days preceding the nightmare of war. When they found that they were real barges bearing food, their great thankfulness found ready expression."

"On Wednesday morning, just one week after the ship left London, we drove up in front of the American legation at Brussels and told Brand Whitlock, the American minister to Belgium, that the relief barges were safely moored in a pocket of the main canal."

All Brussels Rejoice.
"There was no need for the newspapers to spread the report of our arrival. In one hour all Brussels knew and rejoiced. Many people had feared that we would never get the food into Belgium, and that if we did we would not get by the wall of soldiers surrounding Brussels."

"We drove back to Holland by way of Louvain, Aarschot and Thourout, to Breda on the Dutch frontier. We found several villages in the Limburg district that had been without salt for a month. At almost every bridge we met men with boxes soliciting relief from travelers from more fortunate districts. This looks like begging, but there are some conditions justifying it. We met few Belgian men. Eighty per cent of the people in these border districts are women and children. We saw them eating green vegetables, beets and apples. They had little else."

"There were thousands of children, all afraid to laugh. Like their mothers, they seemed spellbound by the melancholy fascination of the ruins in which they found shelter. The contrast between them and the contented, long-suffering German soldier is appalling."

Mr. Bell will return to Rotterdam to continue the work of rushing the emergency food supply into districts where they are most needed.

For more than half a century, England and India took pride in the career of Roberts, the soldier. As the career ripened, she came to hold him in the same category as Wellington, Custer and Kitchener. In none of her wars he was in the thick of the fighting and many times was wounded. As he fought he rose in rank from a subaltern to a general and a commander of all the British armies. As further rewards, he was made a peer of the realm and the recipient of distinguished orders, of which the chief was the Order of the Bath. The most important of his crowning honors came to him in 1902 after his able services in leading the British cause to victory in South Africa.

Three Boys Travel a la Piano Box; Ask for a Drink

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Three orphan boys who shipped themselves in a reinforced, upholstered piano box from Birmingham, N. Y., to Colorado, Cal., as freight were discovered tonight when a sweating truckman dumped the box on the floor of the Erie freight house. "That's some box," he said. "You bet it is," said a young man who stuck a dirty head out of a trap door in the side. "Can I get a drink of water?"

The traveler said he was Willard E. Montague, a snake charmer, and that he had two partners in a bundle of quilts in a corner of the box. The watchman jerked one of the covers and revealed the smiling face of a second boy, a second jerk uncovered a third boy. Then they confessed.

Montague said that was his real name and that he was 12 years old. The others said they were Carl Espe, 17, and William Fox, 18. They wanted to go to a ranch owned by Montague's uncle, Dr. William Tappan Lamb, near Colorado. Not having funds for railroad fare they had a carpenter fit up the box.

Carl of Kandahar, Pretoria and Waterford, two of his most brilliant battles being thus recorded. With the tilt went the unusual privilege of descent through the female line—a privilege explicitly designated to mark Queen Victoria's sympathy with Lord Roberts over the loss of his only son. With the passage went a grant of 100,000 pounds (approximately $200,000) to maintain the dignity of his children.

Lord Roberts at the age of 27 while a shiping captain on leave in England from Indian service, married a Cornish daughter of Captain Bay of the famous Seventy-third Foot. Of the six children born to them three died in infancy, one was killed in battle and two daughters are living.

SHEEP MEN OPPOSE THE ADVENT OF HOMESTEADER

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 14.—The fifty-first annual convention of the National Wool Growers association closed today after the election of officers and the adoption of resolutions which ask congress to make an appropriation for classification of all unoccupied portions of the public domain as to their adaptability for grazing and agricultural purposes and that pending such classification no changes be made in the present land laws. The adoption of this resolution followed statements made by speakers before the convention that much of the public land now being taken up by homesteaders is not well adapted for agricultural purposes and should be devoted to grazing.

BELGIANS EXHAUSTED SO MUCH THEY ARE UNABLE TO OFFER STRONG RESISTANCE

BRUSSELS, Nov. 14.—Today's news from the western war theater increased the belief that the Germans are making a final push in the West. Major military critics of the Race of the Belgians have so thinned their ranks that the exhausted survivors are unable to offer a strong resistance. The Belgians have been repulsed by French soldiers in the recent fighting. He said further that the Belgians are unable to hold out against the German advance. The Belgians are exhausted and are unable to offer strong resistance.

We cannot as a family speak too highly of Peruna and your other remedies. I recommend it to everyone whenever I have a chance. I am sure it is a medicine that when once honestly tried will win its way without any other argument. I am willing to answer any letters of inquiry concerning Peruna."

and French official accounts claim successes.

While the eyes of the world have been on the battle near the North sea coast, there has been some fierce fighting further inland, and the Alsace valley, the Argonne forest and the vicinity of Verdun have again been scenes of some most sanguinary affairs. Neither side, however, has been able to make any impression on the other since the Germans won their victory at Ypres, the fruits of which, however, they have since lost.

RUSSIANS CONTINUE ENVELOPING CAMPAIGN

The Russians continuing their enveloping movement in East Prussia, have now entered Rypin, which is a town of 10,000 inhabitants, and is a strategic point. The Russians have now almost surrounded Emperor William's north-eastern and favorite province. Just southwest of Rypin, however, the Germans have taken the offensive from Thorn and claim to have inflicted a defeat on the Russians near the Vistula river. The Germans, after all, seem to have decided to make a stand behind the Warthe river in Russian Poland, for the Russians announce that there have been engagements with the German advance guards between that river and the Vistula. It may be, however, that the mass of the German army, having retired to the borders of Silesia, these engagements were intended only to delay the Russian advance.

TURKEY BLAMES GREAT BRITAIN FOR THE WAR

Fighting continues in the Caucasus between the Russians and the Turks, but with what result is not known. Turkey has issued a statement blaming the British and the French for the war. The statement says that the British and the French have been the cause of the war and that Turkey is now fighting for its own defense.

COAL COUNTIES GAVE "WETS" BIG MAJORITY

DENVER, Nov. 14.—Los Animas county, the largest coal producing county in Colorado and the center of the Colorado coal strike voted 2586 for prohibition and 5415 against at the recent state election. According to practically complete returns, Huerfano and Fremont counties also gave large "wet" majorities. Rout county cast a "dry" majority of less than 100 votes.

CANADA BUYING WAR HORSES IN COLORADO

DENVER, Nov. 14.—Officers of the Canadian territorial troops purchased 100 horses here today presumably for use of the Canadian forces in the European war. An announcement was made that they expected to buy 5000 head in Colorado if suitable animals could be found.

U. S. IS INVESTIGATING QUESTION OF SOUTH AMERICAN NEUTRALITY

Seeks to Learn Basis for Protests From England and France on Matter

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—In an effort to determine the extent to which neutrality laws particularly with respect to the use of wireless telegraphy have been set by South American countries the state department is now announced today has directed diplomatic and consular officials in those countries to institute inquiries.

Their reports are expected to disclose the foundation upon which rest the charges made by British and French authorities immediately after the naval battle off the Chilean coast that German ships had received supplies and information from shore in violation of the neutrality laws which enabled them to concentrate upon the British squadron. Secretary Bryan said today that the United States had been asked by the British and French ambassadors to use its influence to insure strict enforcement of the rules of neutrality as announced by those governments.

It was intimated today that should violations of neutrality be disclosed the influence of the United States would be promptly exerted upon Latin American states in order that full conformity with neutrality precedents might be obtained and no basis for threats by belligerents of punishment for nations which fail in the strict observance of their obligations.

BOMB FOUND UNDER WHITMAN'S OFFICE IN TOMBS COURT

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—A bomb somewhat similar in construction to the one that wrecked the entrance to the Bronx court house last Wednesday night was found today in the Tombs court room just under the district attorney's offices occupied by Governor-elect Whitman. The room was crowded. The bomb contained gunpowder, slugs and bullets. Its fuse was partly burned.

Corns Quit, Pains Stop, With "GETS-IT"

Quit Plasters, Salves and What-Nots. After using GETS-IT once you will never again have occasion for asking: What can I do to get rid of my corns? GETS-IT is the first sure, certain corn-ender ever known.

If you have tried other things by the score and will now try "GETS-IT," you will realize this glorious fact. You probably are tired sticking on tape that won't stay stuck, plasters that shift themselves right onto your corn, contraptions that make a bundle of your toe and press right down on the corn. Put two drops of "GETS-IT" on that corn in two seconds. The corn is then done as sure as night follows day. The corn shrivels. There's no pain, no fuss. If you think this sounds too good to be true try it tonight on any corn, callus wart or bunion. "GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere. 25c a bottle or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

Hill, Road Magnate,
Travels in Comfort

Five men, resplendently dressed, stepped off the special train that passed through Colorado Springs yesterday over the C. & S. line, bearing President Louis W. Hill of the Great Northern railway and the entire official staff. The party remained but five minutes in the Santa Fe station and only a few got off the train.

Any one of them might have been Mr. Hill, but he was not in the group. When at the last minute a little and-haired man, wearing a soft shirt with a tie, jumped off. "Have I seen him?" he said in response to a question. "Yes, I do see him just about three times a day, when I brush my hair," and he ran his fingers through what he has left.

The party is on a tour of inspection of the road and are en route for Texas. The income of a $10,000 gift recently given by a woman to the University of Vermont is to be used for scholarships for women students.

Disordered Blood Calls for Help

Nature's Willing Workers are Always at Your Service.

If it is eczema, pimples, boils or worse your safeguard is S. S. S., the famous blood purifier. It is always lined up to attack disordered blood. And it always does the work. It does the work after disposition, after altered specialists, mer-cure, iodides, strychnine, arsenic and other destructive drugs that have reaped a harvest of mistakes and left a host of invalids guessing as to what is to come. S. S. S. is not such a drug as the cupidity or ignorance of man would be able to produce. It is Nature's wonderful contribution to our necessities. It is wonderful because it can not be limited; can not be made any other way than to assemble Nature's products and produce what a host of men know as S. S. S., the world's greatest medicine. There are people everywhere that had an old sore or ulcer that doctored at a heinous cost, but that nature put into that old sore the elements that made new tissue, new flesh, and covered it with a new coating of healthy skin. Get a bottle of S. S. S. today and be on the way to perfect blood health. But beware of substitutes. The Swift-Savage Co., medical department, The Swift-Savage Co., 15 Swift Bldg. Atlanta, Ga. Boulder St. Presbyterian Church Finished Oldest Protestant Organization in Springs

THE BOULDER STREET PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Which Has Been Completed After Many Years of Work on the Part of Pastors and Congregation.

The new Boulder Street Presbyterian church, which has been under way of construction for several years, will be finished in about three weeks. The church is located in the 800 block on East Boulder street and is the only Protestant church east of the Santa Fe tracks and north of Costilla street.

The Boulder Street Presbyterian church was one of the first Protestant churches founded in Colorado Springs. It was organized 41 years ago as a Cumberland Presbyterian church in the old Gazette building, which stood where the new Stratton building now stands. The Rev. J. L. Little, who organized the church, was its first pastor. The population of Colorado Springs at that time was about 3,000. From that time until the present, the congregation has housed itself in various parts of the city, finally establishing itself in a permanent home in the commodious and substantial building which soon will be ready for occupation.

Seating Capacity of 400.
The new building has a main auditorium 50 feet square, with a seating capacity of 400. The windows will be opalescent art glass and nearly all have been donated by private individuals and local church organizations. The Brotherhood class of the first Presbyterian church donating one. The basement is arranged for a Sunday school with several separate class rooms, and

MARRIED MEN ARE BETTER CITIZENS THAN BACHELORS

Single Men Ought to Have Wives to Reform Them, Says Stark, Looking Over Records.

Marriage does not always fail to reform a man, according to Chief of Police Howard Stark. Records of the police department for the months of September and October show that, excluding violators of city ordinances, five times as many single men were arrested as there were married men.

During the two months 153 men were arrested on felony charges. Of these 137 were single and 16 married.

"Married men make better citizens than single men," says Chief Stark. "Perhaps it would be a good idea to give letters from eastern women who are looking for husbands to single prisoners and advise them to take advantage of them and keep out of trouble."

"It seems that Belgium will have to face the danger of famine much earlier than any of us thought it would."

STRATTON HOME WITH NEW UNIT NOW NEARLY COMPLETE IS A LITTLE VILLAGE ALL IN ITSELF

Whatever dreams Winfield Scott Stratton may have had about an immense home for the worthy poor of Colorado, his somewhat hazy vision of the ideal surely is being made a reality of stone and concrete today, else the once poor friend of the poor was a visionary. The conception of a vast, modern home for the aged, a place where the old people could live in comfort and happiness, has been neglected by the men entrusted with the work.

It was less than a year ago that the first unit of the Stratton home was completed and thrown open to occupancy. Yet today 25 buildings, several of them large magnificent structures, make up the institution. And the work is but begun. At the present rate of progress, within a comparatively short time the Stratton home will be a village in itself, and a village of no mean proportions.

To describe just the plans itself would require several columns, and many are the features. To relate in any detail the plans, both those being carried out and those being regarded by Superintendent Henry W. Logan and the trustees for the complete happiness of the residents would take hours. And then some would be forgotten, so many are the little things being done. So this is just a word about the second unit.

Second Unit Nearly Complete.

The first unit, completed during the first part of the year, is composed of the three large buildings—the administration building and dormitory and girls' dormitory—and 10 cottages for married people. The dormitories and cottages are filled to capacity. The second unit, just being completed, consists of 15 cottages, for single people, and a large dining hall, also for their use.

The three large buildings were constructed near the Canon City highway and on the top of the highest elevation of ground on the property, while the cottages, both of the first and second unit, were located on lower ground just across a small ravine, making the administration building dominate the entire plan. The 25 cottages in the two units are located somewhat in the shape of an oval, with the dining hall near the center of one side. The space thus included will be packed.

Cottages of Three Types.

The cottages of the new unit are of three types and all about the same size. They are constructed of concrete with red tile roofs, as the other buildings, though the similarity ends with the general idea. The dining hall is somewhat unique in design and decidedly attractive. Applications of sufficient number to more than fill the new unit already have been received and the cottages all will be occupied within a few days after being opened.

It is almost impossible to get a bird's eye view of the Stratton home. The plan is so large even now that one is not only unable to see it all but finds it almost impossible to get even the general idea of the plan. Then the situation is regular. The institution is built in a very slight depression on a high elevation and is out of sight from all directions until one tops the surrounding hills and finds himself within a few hundred yards of it. Which only adds to the beauty of the place.

Just what the trustees will do next is undecided. Another unit probably will be started soon, but of what it will consist is not absolutely known.

It is crossed by a pipe line of the Northfield Water company, and is near telephone lines.

Moose Won't Select Home Site for Year

No action will be taken on the selection of a site for the national Moose home for at least another year, and possibly not before 1916, according to a statement made yesterday by members of the supreme council of the order to Dr. A. C. Magruder, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee in charge of negotiations. No reason for the delay was given. The proposed visit of the supreme council to Colorado Springs to inspect various sites for the sanatorium has been indefinitely postponed.

Committees from several cities in Colorado, Texas and other states have been in Denver to place their claims before the council. The authority for selecting the site has been placed in the hands of a special committee, known as the tuberculosis committee. Among the sites under consideration in this part of the country is 320 acres of land, controlled by T. J. Downer of the city, located near Doud, several miles north of Colorado Springs. It is about four miles from the Modern Woodmen sanatorium and is said to be admirably adapted for sanatorium purposes.

'SICK MAN OF EUROPE' AT LAST ON DEATH BED

Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart Says Turkish Empire Is Crumbling: Fall Not Far Off

Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart in the Chicago Herald.

There are the obsessions of a soldier, how much more tragic are the obsessions of a nation, the last remnants of a proud empire which for half a millennium has caused its people to rejoice and its enemies to tremble. That is what the world is witnessing now. The Sick Man of Europe is dying at last. The government offices are empty. Constantinople is there, 20,000,000 of Turkish subjects still live, hundreds of thousands of them are called soldiers, and a score of vessels name themselves a navy. Nevertheless Turkey is sinking its last days. It may live weeks, months, perhaps a few years, but the end is in sight, the country is dying.

What is this Turkey? How did it come to be? Why should it be dying? And why to predict the property of the government? These are questions which this article will attempt to answer.

A few people in the United States perhaps remember how, when they first studied geography, they learned that the empire of Turkey lay partly in Europe and partly in Asia. European Turkey included the provinces of Wallachia, Moldavia, Roumelia, Bulgaria, Serbia, Bosnia, Herzegovina, Macedonia, Albania and Greece. The principal religion Mohammedan, many of the inhabitants Christians. Turkey was one of the strongest powers in the world.

At present European Turkey includes the city of Constantinople and a district extending a few miles westward to Bulgaria.

Two Centuries Ago.

Two hundred years ago the Turks had a territory, a European population, and a military might superior to that of any European state east of France and west of Russia. They made the Black sea a Turkish lake, they held half the coast of the Aegean, most of the coast of the Black sea, the Mediterranean from the Strait of Gibraltar eastward, northward and westward to the head of the Adriatic, and the interior up to Russia.

Across the Balkans the Turkish dominions stretched to the farthest point of Arabia, to the south of Persia, to the Euphrates, to the Caucasus. They conquered the holiest shrine of the Moslem world at Mecca; they annexed the Caliphate, and thereby the sultans became the religious heads of the whole Mohammedan world.

Also success of the Turkish empire is hard to account for. Who would have dared in the year 1300 to predict that a few score Mongol horsemen could be the nucleus of an immense empire? How did they manage to defeat the great warriors of the Seljuk Turks, and to take their place? How did they manage to beat the Chinese, Persians, and cavaliers, and to reach the Christian lands? The answer is that the Greek empire defended its Asiatic frontier for a long time, and then suddenly gave way before their Ottoman Turks. Then the Turks crossed into Europe, took Constantinople, and surged northward and westward.

In many respects the Turks were always inferior to the people they conquered. They had courage and barbarian beginnings. They were fierce and bloody, part of the Moslem propaganda. They were born destroyers. They destroyed the traditions and the artistic wealth of the ages, and had no traditions of intellectual life to the their place.

Though the Turkish empire was built up by the strength of its army, the troops were not better individually than so many of the other nations. Apparently the Turks were the Germans of their time in the attention they paid to the details of their army. Their cavalry was more dashing than that of their neighbors. They had the best artillery in Europe.

The Decline.

For the decline of Turkey from the position of a first-class European power to a feeble country strained by inward convulsions and pressed upon by enemies from outside, there are three main causes. The complex of races, the repeated conquests of the empire, and the pressure of foreign powers.

The fundamental weakness of Turkey is that it is not Turkish, of six million Turkish subjects in European Turkey, perhaps to the last, Bosnia was less than two million were Moslems. Probably not for a moment in the last 500 years have the Turks been in a majority in their own empire.

We in the United States know what it is to entertain a multitude of race elements, which, taken together, are about as numerous as the original British colonial stock, but we have avoided the mistake of the Turks, who allowed such races to remain as units, to keep their own languages, religion, schools, village life, to be little nations inside of a great nation.

Our policy has been to teach all these foreign elements to become Americans, while the Turks have never undertaken to make the Christian people citizens, even in the sense that Turks are citizens.

The Turks throughout their history have suffered from the lack of a definite and clearly organized government. They are animated by the principle of absolute monarchy, but the rule of succession is uncertain, and there have been many assassinations and forcible setting aside of the throne. The government of the empire has been a shadowy, puppet government, hardly had a glimpse of real power.

England's Interest.

Turkey had been let alone for centuries. The empire would have died an old death a good 50 years ago, for on the European side of the Bosphorus the Christians could probably have long since taken care of themselves. It must be to break their chains, Russia has tried to do so, and then ever since the treaty of 1774 in which the Turks gave their independence to the Moslem empire.

The collapse of the Turkish empire would have been a righteous and natural solution of the European question of Turkey, but it was clear that when one of European Turkey broke up, Constantinople would cease to be Turkish. Without this ancient capital Asiatic Turkey was sure to succumb. When Asiatic Turkey went to pieces, Russia would pick up two magnificent fragments, the valley of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, which is the natural overland route to India, and the latitude of the Persian Gulf, the shortest sea line to the Indian Ocean.

It would also affect the Mohammedans in India, because they looked upon the sultan as the head of their church. Hence, England came out as a friend and supporter of Turkey.

Unfortunately for the present peace of the world, England adopted a policy which Lord Salisbury years later nearly described as "backing the wrong horse." Great Britain and France backed Turkey, fought Russia in the Crimean war. All the murders, outrages, civil wars, executions and cruelties between the little Balkan states in the last few years may fairly be charged to this reference with the political laws of nature.

For about 40 years England was the particular friend of the Turks. To be sure the English urged reforms upon the Turks and the Turks as firms did not carry them out. Even in 1877, when Russia started in the performance of the Bosphorus irregular, Turkish soldiers who were sent to teach the Bulgarians good behavior, sent an answer to the Bulgarians, freed Bulgaria and defeated a peace at San Stefano. England still backed the wrong horse, and blockade the way to Russia, but the boundary line of Turkey was nevertheless pushed back far down the Balkan peninsula.

The Present Situation.

After 1880 England and Russia began to approach each other as Russia drifted out of an alliance with Germany and Austria. Soon after the Turks found a friend, the emperor of Germany. Whatever may have been the ultimate purpose of Germany's conditions were disturbed by the Turkish revolution of 1908, which brought about the deposition of Abdul-Hamid, the only Turk who had a definite policy, and a weak one. This opened the way for the Balkan war of 1912.

In the great war of 1914 the Turks have been in a state almost of frenzy for the whole struggle is so intertwined with the Balkan situation that from the first it seemed likely that Turkey must choose one side or the other. The danger of the Turkish empire is acute. To side with Germany means that in case the allies are victorious Russia will demand and must receive Constantinople and the waters leading to the Aegean sea.

On the other hand, if Germany is victorious it can only be by defeating the Balkan powers, as well as the rest of Europe. Even then three independent states could hardly be placed back under the crescent.

Will Ask for Bigger U.S. Army and Navy

Secretaries to Point Out Lessons to Be Drawn From European War

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Both Secretary Garrison and Secretary Daniels will lay "before" congress in their annual reports some of the lessons which they believe the army and navy of the United States should draw from the war in Europe.

No extraordinary expenditures have been asked for by either the war or navy departments in the annual estimates already filed with the appropriation committees of congress, but the two cabinet heads will discuss in great detail the best methods of obtaining a mobile and adequate army and powerful and efficient fleet.

Secretary Garrison will endeavor to concentrate the attention of congress and the country on the necessity for a definite national military policy, extending over a period of years. Secretary Daniels will recommend two battleships, but probably will ask congress to give the navy authority, as it did last year, to expend a lump sum for submarines without fixing the number.

Submarines in Limelight. The spectacular fables of submarines in the European war have drawn attention to the fact that last year congress appropriated an aggregate of more than $4,000,000 for the building of submarines, and specified that one of these should be a "scouting vessel," practically twice the size of those used in coast patrol.

A BELGIAN INFANTRY AND MACHINE GUN OUTPOST AT WORK IN THE DENSE WOODS ATTEMPTING TO STEM THE TIDE OF THE ONWARD MARCH OF GERMANS TOWARD THE SEA.

Such a submarine, according to the explanation made by naval officers at the time to congress, will be the largest and most powerful of the world, able to accompany the fleet anywhere.

European submarine forces have been able to make only comparatively short voyages from their bases, and the great cruiser submarine planned by America naval officers, for which appropriations will be opened, will replace anything of the kind seen in the present war.

There is even talk of building that Secretary Daniels will ask for money enough to provide a second submarine of the seagoing type, and the usual number—seven or eight—smaller submarines for coast and nation defense.

Warship Plan Unchanged.

While the submarines have attracted most attention, the navy strategists, with whom Secretary Daniels is consulting in the preparation of his annual report, do not believe there should be any change in the plans set forth in the program of two battleships a year and a half.

It is expected among navy men, however, that congress will be impressed by the importance of the submarine, and will approve the appropriation of $10,000,000 for the building of 25 new submarines, including one battleship the American navy could at one stroke step ahead in submarine strength.

Will Ask More Soldiers. Secretary Garrison will urge congress to provide for a universal increase in the army. Without making any specific recommendations as to how many troops should be added, the secretary will point out the importance of increasing the strength at the present time. He has satisfied himself as to this necessity after a careful study of the needs of the garrisons at Hawaii, the Canal Zone and the Philippines.

If congress appropriates the funds they will be applied particularly to recruiting several more infantry regiments, to increasing the number of field artillery forces, and the largest part of the funds undoubtedly will be devoted to freshening an efficient reserve corps.

The plans of the general staff demand 600,000 trained men to repel invasion by an army of 400,000 the United States has about 35,000 field troops available for this work, if all are concentrated. They are assigned to various posts, but only about one-fifth of this number could be used without abandoning other highly important work.

How to Keep Well

times and scurvy disappeared from the navies. Scurvy is now a disease of the man at home. If it were a matter of out-and-out scurvy the subject would be scarcely worth while. Few people have it and those few are so densely ignorant that they would not or could not read what was written. But when it comes to minor scurvy conditions the story is different.

A large proportion of the babies become somewhat scurvy before they get to be two years old. A large proportion of the adults come out of the winter freezeup with a few mild scurvy symptoms. If it were not for this spring medicines would never have been heard of.

In two articles in a recent number of the Journal of the American Medical Association the diseases due to vitamin deficiency were given as follows: Scurvy, infantile scurvy, guinea pig scurvy, rickets, beriberi, ship beriberi and chicken beriberi.

Dr. Darling, one of the writers, did not think pellagra should be put in the list. However, his studies were made among the laborers in the Ranao, Colorado, and they do not have pellagra. Furthermore he was considering pellagra solely in its relation to corn, and his statement was that he did not think it due to eating meal, since the Rand miners ate cornmeal and had no pellagra.

We have an idea that there is no beriberi in the United States, and there is not much. However, some has been discovered; probably more has been overlooked. Dr. Little of St. Anthony's, Newfoundland, says that of 5,000 patients treated in the dispensary of St. Anthony's hospital, 220 were suffering from beriberi.

Beriberi develops whenever men are kept for a long time on a poor diet. The largest food factor is polished rice. Most of the beriberi is among people who live almost altogether on polished rice. When some of the husk of the rice is added, the disease declines.

Next it was found that Newfoundland people, living almost exclusively on oatmeal, developed beriberi. Then came the discovery that living closely on milled flour induced the disease.

In Newfoundland and Labrador the natives take their chickens into their huts for the winter. Confined in close coops and fed on patent flour bread and oatmeal, they become "weak in the back" and die. The natives say that, fed on white bread alone, the hens "get leery and give up."

The remedy is, of course, to vary the diet—to increase the amount of meat and to decrease the amount of starch. The special indication is to get more of the bulks into the offending article of diet; whether it be rice, wheat or oats.

Little says it is easy enough to recognize beriberi in its "over form," but there is not much of the out and out beriberi. He suggests that the ordinary neuritis, such as true sciatica and some of the other painful affections of the nerves, may be mild beriberi conditions, the result of eating too much starch; too little bulks or roughage. In other words, they result from eccentric diets.

Ship beriberi appears usually among sailors making long voyages and living principally on preserved, dried and tinned foods and getting no fresh vegetables. The disease should also show itself among snowed-in miners and prospectors.

In Darling's paper it is made plain that these conditions overlap one another. By using a chart he shows that the seven diseases ranging from rickets at one end of the line to beriberi at the other overlap. One symptom, spongy gums, is present and prominent in five of the six (chickens have no gums by which to show these symptoms). Rickets is the only one in which spongy gums is not present.

There is no wonder that physicians quarrel over the diagnosis of these conditions. There is no wonder that one physician called to see a baby ailing somewhat and not finding what he made a diagnosis of infantile scurvy, and the next one of rickets. The fact is that the diseases are closely related; that diagnosis between them is difficult and of no great importance any way, since the indication in each instance is to change the diet along about the same line.

In scurvy there are spongy gums, anaemia, tendency to bleed and pain in the joints. Many of the persisting rheumatic joints and the continued neuralgias are due to scurvy. A Little said of beriberi, the near-scurvy conditions are much more important than the out-and-out scurvy.

In infantile scurvy the baby becomes pale, anaemic, and has pains in his limbs.

In extreme cases the bones break away from the cartilage, for instance, where the ribs join the breastbone and in the shaft of the femur. In these babies the arms and legs break when scarcely touched. The gums are swollen, but as the teeth are coming through, this symptom is generally overlooked.

In rickets there is pain in the bones and joints and a tendency to sweat, especially about the head. The bones are soft. The child old enough to walk and with muscles ready for walking tries to get about. His bones, too soft to carry the weight and muscle pull, bend out of the proper line. The legs bow out or curve in. The backbone curves improperly.

More important are the changes in the shape of the chest. Higher the breastbone is pushed to the front, or it falls up, causing funnel chest, or a row of knobs appear at the sides of the breastbone, the rickets is more advanced. In either event the lungs are compressed, misshapen, and develop improperly and the vitality is permanently lowered.

The characteristics of the disease in these various conditions vary in certain details, but along general lines they agree. A rather general point of agreement is that overcooking is a cause. Darling says that an important cause of rickets developing in babies is the eating of condensed milk. Condensed milk is a much cooked food. One of the causes of infantile scurvy is given as consumption of overcooked food and meat. These are cooked, and some hold, overcooked.

One of Darling's summaries is as follows: Experimental scurvy of guinea pigs—overcooked and unseasoned diet; ship beriberi—preserved, dried, and tinned foods; chicken beriberi—feeding overcooked food and wheat flour.

When it comes to the food itself, aside from the method of preparation, the groups are alike, in that they are all starchy. The cause of each is a food that is badly out of balance, kept up for a long time. But the details of the bulk of balance differ.

In infantile scurvy the baby is not getting enough fruit juice and is getting too much barley, gruels, starches, and sugars. The remedy is to give orange juice, prune juice, and meat juice; and to decrease the quantity of gruels and other forms of starch and sugars.

In ordinary scurvy the man has been getting too much salt meat, dried meat, and canned stuff. The remedy is to give him an abundance of fresh stuff. Lemonade and lime juice stand at the head of the list of remedies for scurvy. Potatoes, particularly new potatoes, run those juices a close race. Oranges and apples are good; cabbage, spinach, lettuce, turnips, carrots, turnips, beets, onions and celery are fine.

In beriberi the eccentricity consists in eating carbohydrates, such as bread and rice, which are rich in starch—the energy producer—and fairly rich in protein—the tissue builder—but which lack an essential something called vitamin, which something is removed when the outside of the berry is polished clean.

Hair coming out? If dry, thin, faded, bring back its color and lustre

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—then—really new hair, growing all over the scalp. A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scruffy. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine, and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance, an incomparable tress, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all you surely can have beautiful hair—and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Adv.

WHY TRANSATLANTIC SERVICE HAS BEEN CURTAILED FOR THE WINTER

GREAT BRITAIN REQUISITIONS EVERY AVAILABLE
SHIP TO TRANSPORT TROOPS FROM DOMINIONS TO THE BATTLE FRONT IN EUROPE

By HARRY LA GRANGE

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 14.—Although there has been no public announcement forthcoming from the half dozen important transatlantic steamship companies, whose headquarters are here, regarding their plans for service this winter between England and America, the heads of these lines privately predict that not more than one ship a week will depart from an American port. The Cunard line, for example, expects to reduce its sailings to New York to two ships a month. The last time this kind of schedule was in force in the Cunard organization was in 1890, the first year of its existence. The reason for a curtailment of passenger service to a basis that has not existed since antebellum days, as advocated by the steamship company representatives, is simply that the demand for shipping has fallen off until none of the ships which have sailed for New York in the past month have been filled to capacity and eastbound traffic is almost nil.

Service Is Curtailed.

But the fact remains that British steamship companies could offer no better service if the demand were as great as it was in August, when 60 British left English ports bound for New York. At last every first-class passenger ship flying the English flag is at this moment under orders from the admiralty to participate in one or another of the troop ship squadrons which have been organized to bring soldiers by tens of thousands from every part of the empire.

Never in the history of the world's shipping has anything been known comparable with the cruise of one squadron of this kind—and this in spite of the fact that not one word has even yet leaked out about it. All that England knows is what it read in brief dispatches stating that "about 20,000" Canadian troops have been landed at Plymouth. As a matter of fact the total number exceeded 40,000.

I saw today a chart, prepared by the admiralty, which gave the position of each of the 20 fleets on which this army was transported. Even on paper the magnitude of this armada was apparent. There were three long lines of ships, 12 in each line. From the time they cleared the St. Lawrence until they sighted Plymouth the distance between these ships, 800 yards, never varied. In front were three of Britain's newest dreadnoughts—exactly 800 yards between their bows.

Flanked by Warships.

Flanking the first line of the steamship convoys, again 800 yards to right and left, were two other battlefleets. Halfway back down the squadron, on either side, were two more of the convoying battlefleets. The rear of the flotilla was guarded as was its head.

In all 12 battleships safeguarded the passage of these 39 liners.

Stretching out almost over two miles of ocean in width and five miles between the leading and the rearward dreadnoughts this armada, representing in tonnage and value a total such as never before in the history of the world has been approached, made the voyage of 3,000 miles without a single mishap and to within an hour of scheduled time.

Among the liners were almost all the ocean grayhounds that ordinarily carry America's millionaires on their annual pilgrimages to Europe. But they resembled not at all the ships that tourists know. All of them were painted a war gray from funnels to water line. From all of them had been stripped every last vestige of interior adornment. Literally millions of dollars worth of fittings now lie in endless rows of warehouses along the river here where they were stored a month ago before the departure of these liners to Canada. With the plans the admiralty has for these ships carried through, it is doubtful if these fittings will find their way back for many months to come.

Another Great Armada.

For presently there will be organized an even greater armada—even now upward of half a hundred great liners are speeding toward the appointed rendezvous—which will bring almost twice 40,000 troops from another corner of the empire into the fighting line in Europe. And by the time this job has been finished there will be laid out for the immediate dispatch of those same ships to still another end of the globe for still another batch of fighting men.

Not only in its human cargo but in the stuff each ship brought in its hold was this flotilla of liners remarkable. White soldiers filled to overflowing suites, de luxe, rooms that heretofore have been piled high with wardrobe trunks and perishable express matter were loaded with wheat and coal and every conceivable kind of produce. As fast as each ship finished unloading its troops it steamed to Liverpool where the work of transferring its freight was accomplished at top speed.

At this moment there is accumulated in the Mersey docks a greater amount of the necessities of life than at probably any other one time since Liverpool became a port.

TO MY HAPPY PEOPLE

From life. I have bestowed on God, and have the Iron Cross for his noble work at Rheims. God is with us, and I will hope to blow up the Cathedral of Notre Dame at Paris.

Rest assured the contents of the Louvre shall not escape us.

We continue to fight in defense of the fatherland.

MAYOR IS HELD AS HOSTAGE BY GERMANS

Bavarians Mowed Down by the Thousand as They Charged French

PONT-A-MOUSSON, November 14.—Aside the last 3-inch gun of a column of artillery, flanked on either side by a Bavarian soldier with fixed bayonet, Monsieur Bertrand, a round-shouldered, white-haired veteran of the war of 1870, and deputy mayor of Pont-a-Mousson, was "carried from the city as chief hostage of the Germans, in the procession which marked the end of the occupation by three Bavarian regiments.

Pont-a-Mousson is a quiet town of 12,000 inhabitants, the possession of which was valuable to the Germans only because of its bridge which furnishes a convenient crossing of the Moselle on the road from Metz to Toul. It was attacked early in the war, partly for this reason and partly as the result of the defective vision of captive balloon observers, who mistook for fortifications the antique ruins of a castle at the village of Mousson on a hill to the east of the bridge.

Bridge Is Destroyed.

The first bombardment of the town early in August was not followed up until the first days of September, when a captive balloon appeared in the air across the river and German aeroplanes commenced maneuvering over the town. They dropped 200 bombs, killing six and wounding a great number of civilians, but it was not until the 5th that the ringing of the tocsin announced to the citizens that the Germans had appeared on the other side of the river in force. The solemn tones of the bell were still heard when a terrific, dull explosion shook the windows of every house; the bridge from which the town derives its name was no more, and immediately after blowing it up the French troops, in too small numbers to cope with the enemy, quit the town.

The captive balloon was seen again to rise in the distance and soon after the German heavy artillery began to play on the dilapidated antique castle on the hill. During 25 hours they showered great projectiles on that spot, literally pulverizing what remained of the walls, occasionally diverting a shell to the town, after which they exposed the Mousson on an improvised bridge and rushed up to the assault of the supposed fortress, which they found as quiet as the grave. No French soldiers had ever occupied it, and what the Germans took for guns from their captive balloon were simply cleverly disposed tree trunks, and the fire which rentled occasionally to their guns to complete the illusion came from behind the hill.

Story of Occupation.

The story of the occupation of this town is quite the same as that of other kind of other towns, hostages, proclamations and requisitions, but it did not last long. The morning of the 6th the impressive music of the French 3-inch guns was heard in the town; at the same time a French aeroplane was seen to dart through the sky in the direction of the captive balloon, which hastened to descend. These were the preliminaries of the battle of Mousson, to which no dispatches have referred by name, but which was one of the bloodiest in the action of General Castelnau's army defending Nancy.

A continued procession of improvised ambulances passed through the town toward the bridge that night, and other wagons with a more gruesome mission turned to the railroad station, where inhabitants, retired to their houses by order, saw loaded into all kinds of flat cars horse cars, cattle cars, the bodies of those that fell that day at Mousson. They were piled as high as they could be packed and in the early morning these wheeled funeral houses were hauled across the frontier toward Metz.

As for the Sixty-seventh Bavarian infantry, not one of this regiment was ever seen again in the streets of Pont-a-Mousson, and three days later the

Other troops of occupation left the town.

Bavarians Mowed Down.

September 23, the German made their last attempt to recapture Pont-a-Mousson, ending in a charge on the hill of Saint Genevieve. The French position at the summit had been bombarded during the morning and by 3 o'clock the fire of the French seemed to have been definitely silenced. The order for the assault was given and to the music of the life and drum, the Bavarians started up the slope, meeting no resistance until they arrived within a hundred yards of the first line of trenches. Almost to a man the first line went down under the first volley that received them there, others rushing on to take their places fell over their comrades. The ranks came on as if these in the rear had seen nothing of this slaughter and the machine guns and rifles swept them down. In some places it was impossible to close the ranks because the piles of bodies separated them, and finally these heaps of dead and dying became the rampart behind which some of the Bavarians sheltered themselves to protect the retreat of those that were left.

The Saint Genevieve hill was strewn with bodies and the air saturated with the blood of the Bavarians, and all efforts to reach Nancy from that point were definitely abandoned. The total losses of that bloody engagement are not known because no one on this side of the frontier can tell how many Bavarians went to the assault, but it is certain that few got back to their camp at Pargny, and of the three Bavarian regiments that occupied Pont-a-Mousson, it is probable that not a hundred of them returned to German soil.

Swiss Vintage Crops Better in War Times

GENEVA, Nov. 14.—It is a curious fact that during war Swiss vintage harvest has been particularly abundant, and better than in normal times. This year is no exception to the rule. As today, so in 1870, it was abundant during the war, and according to an old Swiss custom, it was named after the person most in the public eye at the moment. At that time it was Bismarck. Now it is "Joffre," but many wines will be named "Joffre" and the liquors "French." A bottle of "Joffre" and a glass of "French" will, of course, in time become a "Joffre" and a "French."

YOUNGEST SOLDIER IN FRANCE IS BOY OF 11

Says He's Real Soldier and Refuses to Leave His Regiment

DIJON, Nov. 14.—The youngest Frenchman on the Oise. He is 11 years old. His mother died before he was born. His father left home on the day of general mobilization.

Finding the solitude of his home unbearable and in the hope of being able to find his father, he one day set out on foot from his native village and attached himself to the seventh squadron of the 10th regiment, which he persistently followed. In spite of the many threats held out to him of sending him off to Giverny, he refused to leave his newly made friends.

Touched by his many little acts of service and devotion to the regiment, the men soon adopted the little fellow, making him up a uniform and even entrusting him with a rifle.

"He is not only devoted to the regiment," said one of his companions, "but with no little emotion, but our young wife is a real handymaid, and full of courage. He has not once flinched when the enemy have been on our arrival in the firing line, with a hail of shrapnel or the whizzing of bullets from a machine gun. One day our 'petit lapin'—for so he has nicknamed him—fired at some 'chance' he was as cool and as plucky as anyone else, and shot remarkably well. You can trust him with any job, and he is in charge of one of our wagons. He has become the spoiled child of the regiment."

The Paris police vainly attempted one day to send this infant home back to his home. "I'm a soldier," declared the urchin, "and a soldier I shall remain as long as there is a German left to fight against."

And the police did not insist. A bulletin of the minister of public instruction the following story is told of a school boy's pluck and endurance.

At the beginning of the war Emile Degand, aged 15, living at Bourges (Allier) was commissioned as a driver and followed the French troops for a fortnight.

On September 20, during the enemy's attack upon the fort of B, while he was resting at T, with some soldiers of a line regiment, a German shell burst close to him in the yard of a farm house, killing one man and wounding nine others, and also injuring the young Degand and a child of seven standing near him.

While everyone was seeking cover from the shrapnel, which was falling in every direction, this courageous boy, bleeding as he was from a severe wound in the arm, picked up his little companion, who had his skull fractured, and carried him under the heavy fire from machine guns to the nearest ambulance, which could only be reached by crossing 200 yards of open ground.

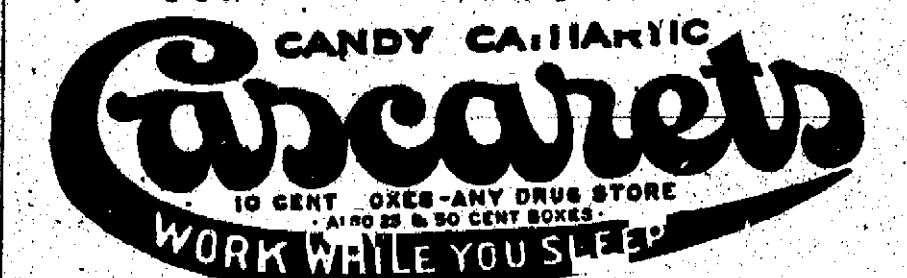

The same evening the poor little fellow of seven died, while young Degand, having had a piece of shell extracted from his arm without a murmur, has ever since then devoted his time to visiting the wounded, going from bed to bed with his arm in a sling.

EVENING DRESS IS ABANDONED IN LONDON

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Practically all the fashionable restaurants and theaters have relaxed their rule in regard to the observance of evening dress. "Rule" is perhaps too strong a word to apply to the unwritten law that society should don evening dress when dining at the more fashionable wear and restaurants or sitting in the stalls of the theaters. Managers, except in a few cases, always point out that there is now no compulsion in the matter. Until the last two or three weeks, evening dress was the general observance, but it is scarcely too much to say that now it is the exception, and both theaters and restaurants look more somber for the change.

BRITISH MONITORS SAVED DAY IN BATTLE ON FLANDERS COAST

MINIATURE WARSHIPS CREPT UP TO SHORE AND POURED DEADLY RAIN OF SHELL INTO THE
GERMAN TRENCHES AMONG DUNES

By PHILLIP EVERETT

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The battle off the Flanders coast—the first engagement fought simultaneously on sea and under the sea and on and over the land—was largely won for the British by the three monitors, Mersey, Humber and Severn. It was a fortunate circumstance for the allies that a British firm happened to be building these three unique boats just when they were needed. The 100-pound shells from their guns and 35-pound projectiles from their howitzers taught the Germans in the rear at a critical moment and undoubtedly had a great deal to do with turning the tide in favor of the defenders.

Meanwhile, German submarines tried in vain to strike the monitors from below, and aeroplanes from both sides circled over the shore.

Few persons seem to have a good idea what a monitor is and how it differs from other war craft.

Monitor Is Little Warship.

A monitor is a heavily-gunned and well-armed ship of slow speed and light draft, a kind of miniature battleship. Having a few—only a few—powerful guns, it can hit hard, and having an armored belt, it can stand pounding. Being of slow speed, it does not require much in the way of engines or boilers and the engine and boiler rooms being small, the displacement can be kept down. The weight of water displaced being small, the vessel is flat, with very little draft, and can consequently maneuver in shallow water, where other vessels would run aground. They can go right up to the coast and fire, instead of having to stand well out.

Even one of the latest British destroyers—of about 1,000 tons, though she has no armor and mounts only three four-inch guns, throwing a 21-pound shell—draws nine and a half feet of water. These monitors, with a full load, have a depth of eight and a half feet, and their mean draft is four and a half feet only; and yet they have a displacement of 1,200 tons and are provided with a belt of two and a half inches of armor.

Economy of Weight.

The economy of weight is effected in the engines and boilers. The destroyer has engines of 24,500 indicated horsepower to drive her at a speed of about 23 knots; the monitor has engines of very small power to propel her at only 11 1/2 knots. Speed is sacrificed.

But the point of interest is the armor. In exchange for speed they obtain first an armored belt for a considerable part of the length of the hull, and extending from the upper deck down below the water line; secondly, a reduced target is provided for torpedo attack—indeed, it is doubtful if they have much to fear from submarines owing to their slight immersion in the water; thirdly, they secure a remarkably powerful armament.

Weapons Carried.

Each vessel carries the following weapons: Two six-inch guns. They are mounted in one arranged turret on the upper deck well forward. Each gun weighs eight and one-third tons, and throws a 100-pound projectile with a velocity at the muzzle of 3,000 feet per second, with sufficient force to penetrate 25 1/2 inches of iron. It can discharge nine of these projectiles a minute, or 18 each minute from the two weapons.

(2) Two 4.7-inch howitzers—that is, guns which fire at a high angle—which are mounted on the upper deck aft. This type of gun weighs eight tons and throws a projectile of 25 pounds with a velocity at the muzzle of 1,150 feet per second.

(3) Four three-pound guns on the boat deck, which can fire 30 rounds a minute.

(4) Six rifle-caliber guns on the boat deck and on the forward and after navigation bridges.

Like any battleship, these vessels have conning towers heavily armored and giving good protection against shells from destroyers. From these they are fought in action, or can be fought; there are two powerful searchlight projectors, and the hulls are well subdivided. They even possess free cooling plants and refrigerators for the cold storage of perishable food. Now in this all. The officers have quite spacious cabins with electric ventilators, or a boat deck which runs above the upper deck, and the commander has not only a steel cabin, but a good-sized reception room. Lastly, owing to the small number of engine-room hands, the complement is only about 100 officers and men.

SUBMARINE SQUADRON FORCED TO CHANGE BASE

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Owing to the activities of German ships along the east coast of England the base of one of the British submarine squadrons has had to be changed. The departure and return of the latter were constantly being reported to the German North sea scout destroyers or trawlers flying the Dutch flag, either by means of some undiscovered wireless plants or more likely by a system of submarine telegraph.

OUCH! LUMBAGO!
RUB PAINS FROM

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Pines," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, your bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Adv.

and perhaps have put to their government, viz: whether they would equally have declared war on France if that violation of neutrality had first come from her side. In the face of this question having remained unanswered and in the face of what has come to light recently about French preparations in Belgium there is no need to expatiate on this subject. All that there is to be said about it has been said by the German chancellor in open session of the reichstag and all that may be added is the remark that "considering England's history and what she did before Copenhagen in 1807, she and all nations should be the last to put on airs of moral indignation over the application of the principle that in time of war "salus republice suprema lex esto."

England Bound to France.

The existence of a convention binding England to France in case of war has—as far as I know—never been admitted officially by England. As I see how from manifestations of Englishmen disapproving of their country's participation in the war, the belief exists nevertheless that such a convention has been concluded. But whether England's declaration of war was the consequence of previously entered obligations or the outcome of present free initiative, the main fact remains that in the last resort it springs from jealousy of Germany's growing sea-power and commercial prosperity. This feeling was the dominant factor in the English foreign policy just as greed for revenge was in France. It was the propelling power for the agreements which England has made and for others which she endeavored but did not succeed to bring about.

England claims the dominion over the seas as her native right, and what is more, she holds it. Her title is no better and no worse than that of the Romans when they conquered the world or of the Turkish sultans in the days of their power. Like them she has succeeded in making good her claim. For the result is that the maritime continent of Europe has been taken apart and devastating each other for the sake of strips of frontier land and a shadowy balance of power. These centuries were England's opportunity and she has made the most of it. That she should mean to keep what she has held to her maritime supremacy is as true as the apple of her eye. It is natural.

American people. I ask for no reply nor manifestation of feelings or opinion from you. What I ask you is to publish this letter as an open letter addressed by me to you signed with my full name. How to do this, I leave entirely to you. Perhaps it would be the simplest way to give it to the Associated Press. If you should not wish to appear before the public as the addressee of my letter it might be published as being addressed to a nameless American friend. The few passages giving a hint to your identity as well as the introductory passage would then have to be left out. It goes without saying that your private reply, if you favor me with one will be treated as such.

ments on land, would not have been able to threaten England's maritime superiority for generations to come. If the issue has been thrown into the balance it has been done so by England's own doing.

But it is not only the nascent German navy that excited the distrust and enmity of England. German colonies and every trading German vessel seems equally to have become "thorns in English eyes." The wish to sweep those vessels from off the seas, to destroy all German ports; in one word, to down Germany, has long been nourished and lately openly avowed in England. Mr. Norman Angell's theories about the great illusion of the profitability of modern warfare seem to have made mighty small impression on his countrymen.

How Magazine Was Charged.
 Russian lust of conquest, French greed of revenge and English envy were the forces at work in the European powder magazine. The Serbian spark ignited it, but the explosion was bound to come sooner or later. What alone could have stopped it would have been England's stepping out of the conspiracy. That she did not do; in fact, betrays its really directing power, will forever remain a blot on her history.

About Japan's motives and methods I do not think it necessary to write. American public opinion will hardly need any enlightenment on this subject. America forced Japan out of the isolation in which she had lived during centuries. I hope the day may not come when she will wish that she had not done so.

The issues of the war stand in relation to its causes and the same attempts have been made to distort and falsify them in the eyes of the American public. I have seen it stated in a New York paper that this war is a fight between civilization and barbarism and I have seen a member of the present English cabinet (quoted as having said that the issue was one between militarism and freedom, civilization and freedom standing, of course

More idiotic rot—excuse the expression—I have never read in my life. What has civilization to do with Ser-

What with Russia's desire to shield her from the consequences of her aggressions and to demonstrate to the world that we are of no account on the Balkans and to establish her own empire or less self-determining there. And if the case of civilization is advanced by Japan's ousting Germany from Kia Chow, why, if it is not be equally turning out that we did the same to Europe, Hong Kong, Singapore, etc., if we have no offer, in India itself? And a person must be indeed at their wits end for arguments to proclaim Russia as a standard-bearer of freedom in her war against us. Compare her treatment of Poles, Finns, Ukrainians (small Russians) and Hebrews with the freedom which the different nationalities enjoy in our empire. And England herself! Is it for freedom's sake that she holds Gibraltar, and that she subjugated the Boers?

Not Civilization and freedom have nothing to do with the issues at stake now, least of all in the sense as though our enemies had drawn the sword for their cause. It is a war for conquest and supremacy stirred up by all the hateful passions in human nature, fully as much as any war that has ever been waged before. But we did not stir it up. We are fighting for our existence, right and justice are on our side, and so we trust will victory be.

What if Allie Win?

The causes of the war are clear. To make its issues still clearer, imagine for a moment and merely for argument's sake the consequences of our adversaries being successful. Russia, England and Japan would remain masters of the field. Is this a consummation any thinking American can wish for?

These are the considerations I wished to lay before you and I ask your assistance to bring them before the

The analysis was performed using the computer program PAUP 4.0 (Swofford, 1999). The heuristic search was performed with 1000 random addition sequences and 1000 steps per random addition sequence. The search was terminated when no new characters were added to the tree. The tree was then collapsed to collapse all branches of length 1. THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

Monday at the Empress the twenty-second episode of this more than interesting serial will be shown. This is the last episode of this wonderful picture. "The Waterloo of the Conspirators" is its title. It is full of life and action, full of thrilling situations and dramatic climaxes. At last Hargrave? That's the question to be answered. Is it Hargrave? Don't miss the last number of this most interesting number. A short synopsis of which follows:

Episode No. 22, "The Waterloo of the Conspirators"—Events are crowding forth in quick succession. The "Black Hundred" are now being pursued relentlessly. Florence finds herself alone in the House of Mystery, fearful of mind, a revolver her only protection. A man comes swinging down the street—enters the House of Mystery—hastens toward Florence. Is this man Hargrave? Lightning-like action prevails. The "Black Hundred" secret love is revealed. Many are taken, but where is Hargrave, where is Hargrave? Back to the House of Mystery. The final scenes of this twenty-second episode are portrayed in vivid, thrilling action. The solution, which will be the twenty-third episode, will be made from the solution that wins the $10,000 prize and will be shown on the screen as soon as practicable.

"Seeds of Jealousy," a single-reel Princess feature is also on the bill and is of uncommon interest to both old and young in the local market. It is a surety a worth-while story.

"Ethel's Roof Party" is a "Komic" and is full of joy and laughter. It is one of the famous "Ethel's Office Boy" series, written by Paul West, a newspaper man, and published in more than 200 Sunday papers throughout the United States. As a laugh producer it has few equals.

"My Friend from India," a three-reel Edison comedy-drama, will be the feature for Thursday, November 19. It is a dandy feature photoplay. Don't miss it, cause you'll miss a good one if you do.

A SCENE FROM "CABIRIA," OPERA HOUSE, FOUR DAYS, COMMENCING NOVEMBER 18.

CABIRIA

Constructed by Gabriele d'Annunzio, Italy's foremost poet and dramatist, with a special score by Signor Manlio Mazzia, produced at a cost of a quarter of a million dollars, a sum exceeding the production expenses of 10 of the largest of comic operas and being presented only in the high-class theaters, "Cabiria" has gratified the ambitions of the directors of the Italia Film company, by reaching the highest point attainable in the amusement world. Their previous production, "The Fall of Troy," was unanimously declared a wonderful photographic achievement, by "Cabiria" surpasses them all, and can only be compared with "The Passion Play," as played by August Lang at Oberammergau, and "Jean d'Arc," as played by Maude Adams at the Harvard stadium. It would have been impossible to have produced "Cabiria" in the same manner as the two aforementioned spectacles, as 5,000 actors and superes were necessary to the completion of the picture, and it is doubtful that any particular spot in the world would have afforded the unusual scenic investiture which became a part picture only after six different countries had been visited and two years' time had been spent. If "Cabiria" had been presented in that way, only those with sufficient resources to enjoy a European trip could have witnessed the exhibition, as in the case of "The Passion Play." It was the intention of the Italia company to present this romantic, historical drama as an educational feature for the masses, and that they have succeeded is proven by the capacity audiences that are daily witnessing the performances at the Knickerbocker theater, New York city, and the announcement that "Cabiria" will be presented at the Opera house for four days, beginning Wednesday evening, November 18.

Eyes Change Color With Clothes Worn

"Deep-Dyed Villain"-type Can Make Orbs Less Black by Affecting Light Garments—Women Know Trick

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Changing the color of one's eyes has hitherto been declared beyond power of man to do, but a series of interesting independent experiments carried on by scientists at Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, have proved it not impossible after all.

The experiment began with the idea that perhaps the so-called color-forming medicines such as iron internally to cause red blood might heighten the reddish iris of some eyes, and such drugs as methylene blue, chlorophyll and the like might cause the blue, greenish or grayish eyes to become of a deeper hue.

All of these experiments proved the uselessness of drugs and medicines as aids to change the color of the pupil. Then a new method of attack was begun. It has been long known to painters, artists and others, as well as psychologists, that "complementary" colors exist. That is to say, colors occur in pairs or opposites, such as green can be seen with your eyes shut after you have stared a little while at red. So a number of subjects were tested to discover the effect of red wall paper on green eyes, or the holding of different colored books in the hand.

How Colors Affect Eyes.

The discovery thus made led ultimately to the finding of the real way to increase the color of your eyes, or even to change them in a fashion. Greenish yellow and blue are complementary colors. When greenish yellow papers or books were held in the hands of the subjects experimented upon, we were amazed to find that the blue eyes, instead of looking a deeper blue, changed into a light-pale, blue-green tint.

Then, greenish yellow lights and globes were used. The same thing held true. There occurred a pallor or fading of the azure iris to one of a cloudy, hazy sky tint. One of the subjects utilized this experiment later, when she was hostess at a tea, where a jealous rival was invited. The latter had beautiful, deep blue orbs, the envy of all her girl friends. The greenish-yellow lights and decorations took all of this ultramarine glory from her eyes.

Then experiments were undertaken along a new tack. Subjects these were girls and men who were experienced students of psychology, with brown eyes were given brown paper, brown books and brown cloaks to wear.

Results Were Startling.

The results were startling. All the browns were greatly intensified, and moderately brown eyes became deep brown.

Then all of the blue-eyed ones were draped with blue coats and blue cloth. The same magic-like result took place. All of the blue took on a new luster of life. They became deeper and prettier. Similar experiments with black, hazel, gray and other eye colors showed that the way to strengthen and deepen the colors of the human iris was to dress the body with the same tint.

Lights effected the same thing. The rival who had her beautiful blue eyes dimmed by the greenish-yellow decorations of the curious hostess afterwards was now mischievously told of the trick played upon her at the former's tea, and she was induced to plan her revenge in the light of these new discoveries.

At once she fell in with the plans and gleefully enhanced the depth of blue color in her own eyes by using blue china, blue decorations, blue candle shades, wore a blue dress, blue neck-piece, and a blue baby ribbon. She even had her florist send all blue flowers to her friends and rivals.

Thus, there has been made available a very simple method to intensify or change the color of your eyes. This holds good not only for women and for outdoor affairs, but also for men and outdoor apparel.

Clothes Made Difference.

One gentleman with jet black eyes of the deep-dyed villain type has usually hitherto clad himself with black suits, black hats, black vests, black coats, black shoes, and carried a black cane. This arrangement, to be sure, augmented the blackness of his eyes.

When informed of these new psychological experiments he changed his tactics completely. He sought a white bandana, a light gray hat, a very light-colored suit of clothes, a white tie, white vest and light tan shoes. The effect on his eyes is striking. Instead of ebony, jet, they have taken on a deep gray-brown, or brownish hazel color.

A young lady, whose eyes are hazel and who always complained about them, has been wearing alternate mixtures of deep brown and red with good effect.

Another, whose light brown eyes were not deeply toned enough to suit, wears black and brown garments to her own great delight at the intensified color of her pupils.

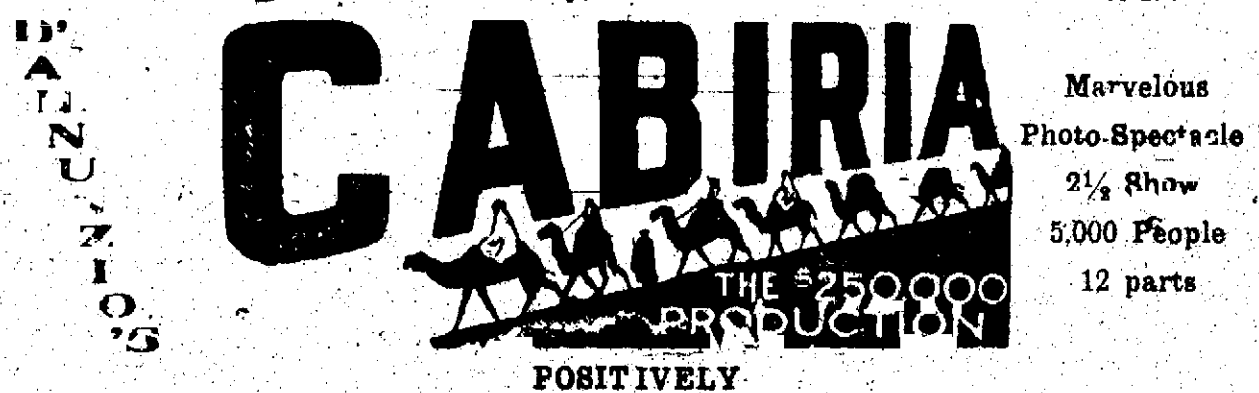

Each person may now, to a slight extent and with reasonable limits, alter the hue of the iris. Even patches of color on the cheeks, eyebrows and the hair itself affect that of the eyes.

Despondency Due to Indigestion.

It is not at all surprising that persons who have indigestion become discouraged and despondent. Here are a few words of cheer for them by Mrs. Blanche Rogers, Indiana, Pa. "For years my digestion was so poor that I could only eat the lightest foods. I tried everything that I heard of to get relief, but not until about a year ago, when I saw Chamberlain's Tablets advertised, and got a bottle of them, did I find the right treatment. I soon began to improve, and since taking a few bottles of them, my digestion is fine." For sale by all druggists.

of Julie M. Lippmann's very popular book, "Martha By-the-Day," which in plain form details its book title. The story was one of the most refreshing bits of recent fiction. The central character, played by Miss Robson, is that of a kind-hearted, level-headed, but mildly comical, New York woman, who is poor and makes half the living of a well-reared little family by choreing. Martha is a doubly noble character, brimful of original humor, and one that will prove a distinct nov-

MAY ROBSON

As Martha in "Martha By-the-Day," at the Opera House, Monday and Tuesday Nights, November 16 and 17. The role is currently suited to Miss Robson's comedy gifts, which is expected that, in public favor, will find as secure a place for her as did her delicious Aunt Mary in "The Revue of Aunt Mary." The Academic Producing company, under whose direction Miss Robson appears, has engaged a splendid supporting company for its star. The cast includes Jane Henn, Langdon Gillet, Emily Lorraine, Henrietta McDaniel, Edwin Brant, Conna Gwynne, Mary Morsch, Roy Ardmore, Elizabeth Warren and others. The settings for the three acts are particularly elaborate and have been designed and painted with exquisite taste.

IS THIS WAR TO SEE THE END OF MYSTIC CHRISTIANITY?

From "Thoughts on This War," by John Galsworthy, in the November Scribner.

Three hundred thousand church spires raised to the glory of Christ. Three hundred million human creatures baptized into his service. And yet war to the death of them all. I trust the Almighty to give the victory to my army. Let your hearts beat to God, and your fists in the face of the enemy. "In prayer we call God's blessing on our valiant troops!" God on the lips of each potentate, and under the 100,000 spires prayer that 22,000,000 servants of Christ may receive from God the blessed strength to tear and blow each other to pieces, to ravage and burn, to crush husbands from wives, fathers from their children, to starve the poor, and everywhere destroy the works of the spirit. Prayer under the 100,000 spires for the blessed strength of God, to use the noblest, most loyal instincts of the human race to the ends of carnage! "God be with us to the death and dishonor of our foes" (whose God he is no less than ours). Let the God who gave his only begotten Son to bring on earth peace and good will toward men!

No creed—in these days when two and two are put together—can stand against such feeling, such devotion of its foundation. After this monstrous mockery, beneath this grinning skull of irony, how shall there remain faith in a religion preached and practiced to such ends? When this war is over and reason resumes its sway our dogmas will be found to have been scored through forever. Whatever else the outcome of this business has up to be, realize the truth. It is the death of the Christian era. Let us will that be the birth of an other Christianity that may prove practical.

FABRICS OF THE PAST THE FABRICS OF TODAY

Velours and Ratine With Plushlike Pile for Daytime Wear; Brocades for Evening Wear

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—There are far less new fabrics upon the market this season than last. The variety, however, does not seem to be lessened, for it merely means that instead of the new we have gone back to many of the fabrics which have been considered passe for many seasons.

Velour de laines and ratine are recent novelties which have held their own. This year they have become thicker and the pile of the velour de laines is heavier, making it seem almost plush like.

Brocade is another fabric that has a renewed vogue this year, and many suits and costumes are to be seen of it. The chiffon brocade, which is light weight in comparison with the other brocades, is used extensively for one-piece dresses. Black, blue, green, beige and mauve are colors which are especially attractive in brocade.

Fuller, cape, called breman and bergerine, is very popular in silk or wool. It has a suppleness and a firmness which make it especially suited to the one-piece frock. The clothes of the season are what determine the fashions, and this year the one-piece frock and separate coats cause fashions, and are substantial to be the mode.

There is some of the staidness of decades, gabardine and fabrics which have a long-haired silky finish called kiltens, or, near de saine, mouse skin, and zibeline. Velvet imitation, made and Persian lamb-like complete a wide variety of the smart fabrics for the daylight hours.

ECZEMA IN MASS OF PIMPLES

Itching Burning Sensation Unbearable. Severe Irritation. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Free From Eczema.

2511 Best St., Cheyenne, Wyo.—My eczema appeared in the worst form. It looked like a great mass of pimples. The itching and burning sensation was unbearable and it was impossible for me to sleep for more than a half hour at a time so severe was the irritation.

"After we tried medicine and other remedies which did not prove successful a neighbor told us to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. My mother obtained the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and began using them immediately. I washed my face and head thoroughly with the soap and then applied the ointment. I began to improve rapidly and within two weeks I was perfectly free from the eczema." (Signed) MAJOR CRUSE, April 8, 1914.

A generation of mothers has found Cuticura well suited for cleansing and protecting the skin and hair of infants and children as Cuticura Soap. Its absolute purity and refreshing fragrance alone are enough to recommend it above ordinary skin soaps, but there are added to these qualities delicate yet effective emollient properties derived from Cuticura Ointment, which render it most valuable in overcoming a tendency to distressing eruptions and promoting a normal condition of skin and hair health. Cuticura Soap (25c) and Cuticura Ointment (50c) sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free with 32-p. book on the skin and scalp. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, N. Y."

The jumper effect in dresses which is so popular at the present time, adds another happy way of combining fabrics and colors. In fairly silk comes a long tunic, frock with a flared lower skirt and a jumper blouse waist. The pieces and undergarments of this waist are of soft silk with a Paisley design. A close-fitting little hat with three peppy feathers in the front gives extra dash to the costume.

Plaids in gray and festive colors are always a bright note in the seasons when they are popular. In greens and blues with a touch of red or yellow they are used to advantage for the winter frock, especially for home wear, but when made in heavy fabrics, under a stylish smart coat. The model illustrated is in dark green with a blue and black stripe checked off with narrow lines of red. The bodice is in brocade effect and the skirt has a long tunic which dips to the edge of the lower skirt in front and graduates higher in the back. The lower skirt and crushed grille are of black. The flaring collar and bounding cuffs are of doubled white organza.

Brocade, which embodies in themselves all the sumptuousness of a century ago are the fabrics used for evening gowns.

On heavy silk, thin voile, cotton or velvet, gold and silver threads are woven into the brocade designs. There are also velvet brocades, velvets and chiffons with a lot of gold or silver in or outlining the design. These brocades are not stiff as of old, but soft and plaided fabrics are especially popular. Black satin, tulle and velvet hold a strong place among evening gowns. These are also used for the day frock, as well as for the evening frock. The model illustrated is in dark green with a blue and black stripe checked off with narrow lines of red. The bodice is in brocade effect and the skirt has a long tunic which dips to the edge of the lower skirt in front and graduates higher in the back. The lower skirt and crushed grille are of black. The flaring collar and bounding cuffs are of doubled white organza.

For the younger generation, some chiffon frocks with a six or eight-inch satin stripe in self-color woven on the cuffs. Tunes and tulle are made with thin stripes on the cuffs and with the thin veil for the rest of the frock. These costumes are called the light shades so popular for evening wear. Gold, blue, green and pink, with a touch of green, shell pinks, and shades of green, are used in a yellow that so closely resembles gold that it hardly seems possible that it is not a metal cloth.

The costumes of the present demand many accessories in the way of neck wear and the present tendency is toward the cape effect. Cape effects are also to be seen and are an attractive addition to a dark frock of serge, gabardine or tulle. On the popular dark blue frocks are to be seen cuffs and collars in yellow, orange or cerise. One set of cuffs in had turned back and a standing collar, hemmed in an inch-wide hem. Another set was a wide line with yellow stripes about a quarter of an inch apart. The other was high and did not meet in the front, while the turkish cuffs were wide and pointed. The cuffs of the other set were bound with yellow to match the stripe in the linen.

There has been a good deal of talk about the advent of the high-heeled shoe, but except for the walking shoes with a little heel and spring, or very low heels the high shoe appeared. Short-capped shoes are again in vogue, with high French or Vienna heels. The Vienna heel is quite the newest heel and is neither French, Cuban nor Mexican. It is high, narrow and straight and looks pinched.

The Damsel.
For the benefit of the day nursery, a "damsel" will be given in the Auditorium, Wednesday afternoon, November 25, from 4 till 7. Plans for the festivity, which will be one of the most brilliant of the season, are now under way in charge of a committee consisting of Mrs. (Honorable) R. Schley, chairman; Mrs. James T. Anderson, Miss Miriam Washburn, and the Messrs. Ralph O. Giddings and E. M. P. Taylor. Miss Washburn is in charge of the waitress committee.

The following will serve: Mesdames Lewis Gibbs, Carpenter, Samuel S. Pierce, Jefferson Hayes Davis, Clifford Jones, Charles L. Tait, Thomas A. Gauss, Olsen, H. Hummel and William Howard, and the Messrs. Laura and Eleanor Anderson, Charlotte Kiesel, Alice Farnsworth, Elizabeth Lockhart, Charlotte Tofield, Blanche Palmer, Lucy Jones, Ethel and Frances Hall and Anna Byrne. Tables, which will accommodate from four to six, may be reserved by telephoning any member of Mrs. Schley's committee. Tables have already been engaged by Mesdames Frances Drexel Smith, William A. Otis, J. Arthur Connell, Chester Alan Arthur, Stacy Courtis Richmond, James F. Burns and George K. Shields.

Tea for Mrs. Richards.
One of the largest of the week's social functions was the tea given by Mrs. M. C. Gile at her home, 1121 North Tenth street, Wednesday afternoon for Mrs. William F. Richards, nee Miss Laura Moore. About 150 friends came to greet the guest of honor between 4 and 6. The color scheme of decorations for the occasion was rose, faithfully carried out in the myriad day-break carnations, candle shades, and the important details.

Mrs. C. L. Fuller assisted the hostess in receiving, and the Messrs. Marion Park and Melburn Campbell in dispensing hospitality. Mrs. William F. Richards, Mrs. Edward S. Parsons, Mrs. Franklin B. Brooks and Miss Sarah Warren served tea and coffee in the dining room. Sherbet was served in the living room by Mrs. Roger H. Motter and Mrs. Edward W. Kohn.

Assisting with the refreshments were the Messrs. Louis Jones, Helen Jackson, Barbara Keenan, Ethel and Frances Hall, Ruth and Miriam Washburn.

Though a resident of Lincoln, Neb., Mrs. Richards had spent four years in Munich previous to her marriage, which took place in Portland last spring, and was one of the society events of the season. Mrs. Richards are at home at 1121 North Tenth avenue.

"Conditions Preceding Goodness."
The Rev. William Watson Ramsey of the First Presbyterian church addressed a regular meeting of the Lowell School Improvement League, held in that building, Wednesday afternoon. His discussion was heard with interest. It was in part:

"Many things precede goodness. We cannot make children good by lecturing—give them a chance. Make conditions suitable for their growth toward character. First, food—'Man is what he eats.' To be ill-fed is a bad start in life. We in America are said to spend more money on the table than on other things. But it does not follow that we have the best food. The quickest, intelligent, and good cooking, the healthiest, the most nutritious, the most temperate and anaemic. We can't make good men and women out of sickly boys and girls who have not learned self-control in the eating of sweets. Substitute fruits for candy. Get the doctor to speak to this association and go into particulars about food and health.

"The opening of the dental clinic will be a long step forward, but will need to be supplemented by home drill with a toothbrush. The man who advertises for a wife and mentioned only that she must have good teeth was not so far wrong after all. For that would probably mean that she had a sweet breath, a good digestion, and so a good temper, and very likely that she was neat and orderly in her habits. It will take patience to train the children in habitual cleanliness, but it is worth while.

"Encourage sleeping out of doors regularly. Dr. Evans' advice: 'If you are sick and want to be well sleep on a porch; and if you are well and want to stay well, sleep on a porch'—is needed, even in Colorado. If you want fresh and good natured, give them plenty of fresh air.

"I am a preacher and am talking to parents and teachers, but say deliberately that play has more effect on children's characters than preaching or study. If the children do not play fast in their games they will not practice fast play when they are grown. If they learn the principles of law and order in their playground state they will apply those principles and defend them later on as good citizens. Trust the instincts of the children. They are bundles of activity, restless, eager. That is the way they grow and get possession of their powers.

"Avoid prohibitions as much as possible. Of course, sometimes the have to be prohibitive, but children are apt to take them as a challenge, a test of strength or will, in which it seems to them creditable to win. The best way is to keep manifest opportunities of good open. Fully occupied children have the least time to go wrong."

Song of sorship Urged.
One of the largest audiences yet seen at any meeting of the Parent-Teacher association assembled, Tuesday afternoon at the Columbia school. Not the least of the attractions was the talk of Mrs. H. Howard Brown on "The Appreciation of Good Music." Mrs. Brown urged the adoption of a national board of censorship for popular songs, suggesting that it was more of a necessity than supervision of motion picture films. She pointed out that whereas the impression received at the "moving" is but fleeting, the song is taken into the home, where its life is often vulgar if not immoral, are memorized and become a constant reproach to decency. Special music of the afternoon consisted of three songs by Miss Agnes Neuen, vocalist, and two Grieg dances by Nelson Brett, pianist.

Dentists Hold Banquet.
The Dental association of Colorado Springs held its monthly banquet in the Dutch room at the Arcadia hotel on Monday evening. The speaker of the evening was Dr. Charles O. Gies, president of the El Paso County Medical association.

Funds for Dental Clinic.
More than $25 was realized for the dental infirmary by "The Old-Fashioned Party" given by the Washington School Improvement League on Friday evening, November 6. Its social and financial success is due largely to Miss Rena Strong and Earl Weber, who gave musical selections, and Lloyd Shaw, whose drill humor delighted the audience. The success of several readings. The guests were seen in many quiet and attractive Colonial costumes. Mrs. Frances A. Hunter, wearing a black gown and rare old lace, directed the grand march.

Back to the Waltz and Two-Step.
That the waltz and two-step are in the least archaic is emphatically denied by the crowd of 150 who attended the first of the winter series of dances at the Masonic temple on Wednesday evening, for the dance order of 18 numbers contained nothing else. Among those present were Messrs. and Mesdames Puffer, Campbell, Dudley, Wilson, Winslow, Burdham, Sims, Russell, McLean, Castello, Cornforth, Maury, Kennedy, Hopper, Potts, Brazil, Stockdale, Law, Stark, Harper, Mullin, Paul, Madden, Friedel, McCoy, Richards, Johnson, Snyder, Underhill, Mahler, the Messrs. Rose, Southwick, Ellis, Walker, Ferguson, McKeon, Hamilton, Vedder, Hecker, McKinnis, Mayhew, Weber, Barr, McCormick, Morrill, Sparks, Kamber, Love, Messers, Potts, Gilbert, Gillett, Sommers, Sims, Bruner, Puffer, Morse, Wilches, Carrington, Sleeman, Brown, McCormick, Woodson, Kamber, Zimmerman, Hall, Himebaugh, Kurth, Heidley, Hassell, Simpson, Taff, Abbott and Weir. Music was furnished by Pink's orchestra.

There will be four more dances during the season, the next on December 8.

College Girls Glee Club Concert.
The Girls Glee club of Colorado college has departed from all traditions this year, in that its concert will be given during the first semester, the date being Saturday, November 21. The program, presents several novelties, among which are a piano solo and a vocal duet. Nothing heavy has been attempted, and the numbers chosen are calculated to appeal more to popular taste than formerly.

Among the brightest selections are "Carpenter," a beautiful waltz song, and "Swing Along," one of the most popular high-class "coon songs" of the day. There are also several humorous songs. The college contains many good singers this year, and the record-breaking enrollment makes possible a glee club of 41 voices. Miss Lela B. Morris is director and Mrs. E. P. Purdy accompanist. The complete program of this week's concert follows: Linda's Miners' Song, Adam Giebel, Chit Chit (old English), Alfred Moffat, The Club.

Blackman-Gibbs Wedding Details.
Mr. and Mrs. Carl Reed Blackman (Lucy Perkins Gibbs), who were married on November 4 at the bride's home, Navasota, Tex., are on a six weeks' wedding trip to Boston, New York, Chicago and Montreal, and on their return will reside in this city, where the groom is a member of the brokerage firm of Blackman, Dolan & Co. The following extracts are taken from the Navasota Examiner-Review's account of the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. W. M. Lewis at the First Presbyterian church:

The interior of this handsome edifice had an exceedingly effective decoration, the bridal motif of pink and green being artistically observed. A grouping of stately palms and beautiful ferns formed a partial screen to the massive pipe organ. To either side of the altar was a graceful hanging of ferns, and at intervals within this fern decked nuptial bower, were white pedestals which held tall crystal vases filled with gorgeous pink chrysanthemums. The chancel pedestal vases also held clusters of this same queen of autumn blossoms. Presiding at the altar of the bridal party, with Miss Margaret Baylor at the organ, Mrs. J. Hubert Powell sang, most feelingly, "You Taught My Heart to Sing," Rome, followed by Mrs. Wilbur S. Gibbs of Huntville, whose rich contralto voice was beautiful in "Wouldst Thou, My Name," Psalms. Miss Baylor gave as the professional Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The ushers were Mr. L. H. Culham, Dallas; Dr. W. C. Berkenmeyer, Denver; Mr. Horace Frantz, Colorado Springs; Mr. Jas. N. Fisher, The brides in waiting were Misses Christine Bowen, Ida Blackman, Colorado Springs; Jean Mateer, Corpus Christi, Ada Rhodes; the honor maids, Misses Mary and Blake Gibbs, sisters of the bride. They were followed by the little page, Russell Blackman, and a dear little ring bearer, Gratia Belle Blackman, who carried the wedding ring on a wee white satin pillow.

The ceremony at the church was followed by a brilliant reception at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. L. J. Wilson, on Tenth street.

For the reception, the handsome Wilson home had its bridal adornment of exquisite blossoms and ferns. In the drawing room the mantel held a banking of ferns and bridesmaids' nosegays. In the music room were baskets of gaily marquetries. These lovely blossoms were banked in profusion on the mantel.

The dining room had a charming and effective arrangement of pink Killarney roses and ferns on the buffet and cabinet. The polished table was laid with exquisite Florentine lace, the center reflector holding a crystal vase filled with a shower of Killarney roses. Crystal candlesticks held pink tapers with rose shades.

The bride's going-away gown was a midnight blue, tailored suit of calico, with blue chiffon and lace waist, and blue gloves en suite.

The honor maids wore exquisite gowns of pink crepe meteor with long tulle of chiffon. Chaplets of pink roses were worn in the hair. They carried arm bouquets of pink Killarney roses. The brides in waiting wore lovely gowns of shimmering green silk and georgette crepe, with shoulder draperies of silver lace, using rambler chaplets in the hair and carrying shapely bouquets of gorgeous pink chrysanthemums.

The little ring bearer was daintily clad in a white lace and beehorned frock, and the page was mainly in his suit of white.

The bride's favors to her maids were this silver purse pencils with name and date. The groom's favors to the men were silver monogrammed magazine pencils.

High School Faculty Reception.
Thursday afternoon from 4 to 6 a reception was held in the high school gymnasium for members of the school board and high school faculty. Members of the Zeta Kappa and Sigma Kappa literary societies were joint hostesses. The gymnasium was converted into a huge drawing room for the occasion, decorated with ferns and pink and yellow roses, typifying the societies' colors. In the receiving line were the Messrs. Freda Schmitt, president of Zeta; Margaret Held, president of Sigma; Eleanor Battist, president of Zeta; Vivian Beebe, vice president of Zeta; Josephine Hamilton, vice president of Sigma; Roselle Craig, vice president of Zeta.

Presiding at the tea tables under the sorority seals at either end of the room were Mrs. Carlos M. Cole, Mrs. Roscoe C. Hill, Miss Frances Pickens, Miss Lilian Johnson, Miss Marjorie Deering and Miss Marie Shiner. Assisting the girls in various capacities were the faculty supervisors, Miss Marjorie Copper of Zeta and Miss Ruth Brown of Sigma. The general attractiveness of the scene was enhanced by the white dresses of the sorority members, adorned with the Zeta yellow and the Sigma pink tea roses. An unusually interesting musical program delighted the 100 guests. It was as follows:

Mrs. Edward S. Parsons received on Tuesday afternoon at her home on Wood avenue, honoring the members of Phi Beta Kappa society of Colorado college. Members of the faculty and others were in attendance.

Miss Park of the college gave an interesting account of her experiences in Europe during the outbreak of the war. Mrs. William Frederick Blomgren presided at the tea table.

Allen-Bennett Wedding.
Miss Addie Madeline Allen and Mr. Clifford Winthrop Bennett were married last Sunday at 5 o'clock. The Rev. Merle N. Smith performed the ceremony, only the immediate families being present. The bride was attired in her going-away gown and a corsage of valley lilies.

Refreshments were served immediately following the ceremony, the bridal couple leaving on the 7 o'clock train for Denver, where they spent a brief honeymoon. The young people are well known in this city, having spent the greater part of their lives here, receiving their education in the Springs schools. The bride attended Cutler academy. They will make their home here.

One Refugee's Experience.
After a year abroad, Mrs. Helen L. Ballou returned last week to her home, 112 East San Rafael street. Since the fateful day in August, when England declared war on Germany, her every move has been fraught with interest for the "stay-at-homes." Mrs. Ballou was in Munich at the time, and the city instantly burst into a fearful turmoil.

One manifestation of the panic was a rumor that the water in the hotel at which she was staying had been poisoned by English spies, but this ridiculous bugaboo was soon dispelled. There immediately followed, however, an exodus of fear-crazed American refugees as from a burning theater. Mrs. Ballou foresaw truly that they would bring most of their discomfort on themselves by their haste, and decided to remain in Munich, though, partly that her people might know where she was.

Gold disappeared from circulation as if by magic. Mrs. Ballou's funds soon ran low and lower, and she finally took lodgings in a humble dwelling. Here her temporary financial straits reacted on her somewhat indifferently, for a mysterious fellow boarder turned out to be a German officer, who accused her of spying on him, and for a time she was under the suspicion which few refugees escaped. Practically driven out of Munich by the hordes of mobilizing troops, which usurped all accommodations, Mrs. Ballou made her way third class to Dresden, still loaded and crowded by the ubiquitous minions of the war lord.

In Dresden she found German friends, took shelter at their home for a time and proceeded, with many discomforts, to Berlin. Here the American embassy consented to lend her $25 and no more, which she declined. Then the United States cruiser Tennessee reached the coast. Mrs. Ballou found that her share of the $2,000,000 boat carried would be just $75, and neither was this enough to float her off the financial shoals. As a last resort she bethought her of Dr. John Clevie Symmes, a Berlin physician who was in Colorado Springs two years ago. She went to him, he remembered Springs' hospitality, and promptly advanced her $500 in German gold. To get it in English currency was impossible. She journeyed to Rotterdam escorted by an attaché of the embassy, who was trying to get some official dispatches and see his daughter safely off for the United States. At Rotterdam she found it impossible to get passage at any price, and had to flush and took passage for Portsmouth on a channel ferry to which passengers literally clung by the teeth. They crossed the night before the British cruiser Aboukir, U.S.S. and O.S. were blown up by submarines in the vicinity. In London Mrs. Ballou found that the American Express company would not transfer her German gold to English under any circumstances, but at length induced Cook's to convert it for the modest consideration of 50 percent. At Liverpool she engaged a large steamer on the Allan line, steamships Albatross and Tanager, both of which were requisitioned for government service on the eve of sailing. She eventually secured first-class accommodations on the Neptunia of the same line and reached Montreal on October 2. After her arrival Mrs. Ballou visited her son in Montreal for a month.

Miss Barnes Wins Honors.
Friends of Miss Marguerite Barnes of this city will be interested in hearing that she has just been awarded the Western Drawing scholarship at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, where for the last two years she has been studying normal art and manual training. This scholarship not only carries with it distinction in a department numbering from three to four thousand pupils, but has a monetary value of $50. Miss Barnes was a teacher in the Lowell school for two years, coming to Colorado Springs after having graduated from the Marquette High school and later from the Northern Lake Normal school of Marquette, Mich. Miss Barnes has shown herself in both art and music, having received a scholarship in music in Colorado Springs.

Bible Class Entertainment.
Members of the Bible class district two, section 18, entertained the ladies in the district Friday afternoon at an enjoyable social, held at the home of one of the members, Mrs. G. N. Broyles, 314 North Sheridan avenue. After a piano solo by Mrs. Broyles, Dr. S. E. Brewster, a special guest of the afternoon, gave an address on the value and importance of the study of the Bible. Other numbers on the program were vocal solos by Mrs. H. A. Thompson and Master Eugene Broyles, and readings by Mrs. E. C. Loomis. An interesting game contest was conducted, in which Miss Josephine McCannet won the honors. A social hour followed during which dainty refreshments were served. Guests and mountaineers present were Mrs. A. Carlstrom, Mrs. A. E. Williams, Mrs. H. L. Wood, Mrs. C. H. McCumler, Mrs. Bessie McCumler, Mrs. W. L. Rinken, Mrs. D. E. Coffey, Mrs. William May, Mrs. H. A. Thompson, Mrs. C. H. Hamilton, Mrs. J. C. Wahlenmaier, Miss Anna Bullock, Mrs. S. Thompson, Mrs. E. C. Loomis and Mrs. G. N. Broyles.

Mrs. Jewett Sponsors Sewing Club.
As a result of Mrs. W. K. Jewett's recent talk on the value of the girls club, the Girls' Relief Sewing club was organized last week and will hold triweekly meetings in club rooms. The movement was spontaneous one on the part of the young ladies. About 50 young women have interested themselves, ready in an industry which will help fund, contribute to the relief fund, and help the war effort. The club is of course, a part of the Belgian Relief club, and its work will be forwarded with the second shipment on December 2.

MILLIONS WASTED YEARLY IN UPKEEP OF USELESS FORTS

Army 'Pork Barrel' Shows
Why Defense Force Inefficient, Ill Equipped

Arthur Sears Henning, in Chicago Tribune.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 10.—Taxpayers who cannot understand why the United States army is inefficient and ill-equipped will find one of the reasons therein, if they peer into the depths of the congressional "pork barrel."

There they will discover that one of the largest and richest portions of the contents is "army pork." The people are required by Congress to support not only the army, but the army "pork barrel." About $100,000,000 is expended annually on the upkeep of our army, but at the same time $30,000,000 is expended on the upkeep of the "pork barrel."

Conservatively estimated, it is on an unbusinesslike basis and other extravagances, the creation and maintenance of which is designed to enhance the political prestige of individual Senators and representatives.

$30,000,000 More Wasted.

Aside from pure "pork," about $30,000,000 annually, according to war department officials, is expended wastefully.

Pork barrel appropriations have been lavished most conspicuously upon four comparatively new army posts: Fort D. A. Russell, at Cheyenne, Wyo.; Fort Des Moines, at Des Moines, Ia.; Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, Ind.; Fort Sill, Okla.

Take the case of Fort D. A. Russell. This post was established in 1907, when the troops of the regular army were fighting Indians.

In the middle of the decade beginning with 1909 the general staff of the army advocated the abolition of Fort D. A. Russell. Senator Warren of Wyoming, "got busy" with the powerful Republican machine, while the army was fighting Indians.

In legislative circles this is called "logrolling"—the maneuver to get a sufficient number of United States Senators to get a bill through to make Fort D. A. Russell a big "pork barrel."

Form an "Alliance."

At this time Representative Hull of Iowa, a Republican, was chairman of the house military affairs committee. A few conferences, between Senator Warren and Representative Hull fixed the matter in the house so that the bill introduced by Senator Warren might have easy sailing.

When the bill for changing the post came up in committee it was dropped there, for there was insufficient vote at Cheyenne for the needs of a post of the size which was proposed by Senator Warren's "pork barrel." Army engineers went to Cheyenne to make an investigation.

The engineers reported that the site was there no better than that of any other site for the needs of the post proposed, but that if the post was built the first brought would cost $10,000,000, and the water for the town of Cheyenne.

Has Cost U. S. $4,925,466.

Despite the protests of the army officers and the adverse testimony of the Senate, the bill for Fort D. A. Russell passed. On June 30, 1911, the post had cost the United States $4,925,466. Army officers say it is as good as a brigade post, that it is too far away from the supply depots and the other mobile troops.

Mr. Hull obtained the aid and support of Senator Warren and the latter's colleagues in the Senate to pay some of the people's money for "pork" for Des Moines, Ia., which was in Mr. Hull's district. Mr. Hull wanted a military post at Des Moines. Army officers did not want it there and told him so. Hull's idea prevailed and a regular post was authorized in 1900 by Congress for Des Moines, including the land. This post has cost the government $1,317,291.

In the Indiana wanted some "pork" and with the assistance of Senators Fairbanks and Beveridge and Representative Overstreet, Fort Benjamin Harrison was located near Indianapolis. They asked for $1,354,188, with which to build a post for one regiment of infantry.

The army and army officers protest. The land for the post, 2,500 acres, cost $151,000. Since the creation of this post more than $10,000 has been spent in repairs to the buildings.

And still the pork gatherers were not satisfied. Out at Fort Sill, which had been created in 1888, and the abandonment of which had been recommended by several of the best army officers, there were $1,252,288 of land which belonged to the government.

Army officers recommended this land be disposed of and the post destroyed. "No, indeed," said the citizens around Fort Sill. "No, indeed," said Oklahoma's delegation in Congress. In vain did the army officers at Washington protest. A new post was authorized in 1905. At the end of the fiscal year 1911 just $1,252,288 was spent on improvements.

And this is not all. In the army there are a number of posts which the general staff has recommended be abandoned because of whose maintenance was costing up thousands of dollars.

Would Close These Posts.

If the leading officers of the army had their way, the following posts would have been closed years ago and sold and the troops concentrated in barracks in the cities on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and the Mexican frontier:

Fort Brady, Mich.	15,014
Fort Clark, Tex.	138,704
Fort Clark, Neb.	908,701
Fort Douglas, Utah	219,729
Fort Duane, Pa.	178,108
Fort Laramie, N. D.	618,453

Port Logan, H. Roots, Ark. 125,122
Fort Logan, Colo. 819,222
Fort Mackintosh, Tex. 224,028
Fort Mackenzie, Wyo. 121,986
Fort Meade, S. D. 122,787
Fort Omaha, Neb. 433,940
Fort Robinson, Neb. 191,112
Fort Thomas, Ky. 428,985
Fort Wayne, Mich. 278,567
Whipple Barracks, Ariz. 692,615

In stating they would close these posts the officers added that they realized that nine-tenths of these posts could not now be closed because of the heavy expenditures on them in the last 10 years. A majority of these expenditures were made under the whip and spur of members of the Senate and House and in contravention to recommendation of the army chiefs.

These officers pointed out that the cavalry arm should be stationed on the Mexican border, the field artillery arm, and that the infantry should be housed in barracks in the cities on the two coasts.

Penrod

of simple paths were passing before his inward eye. About the most painful was the vision of lovely Marjorie Jones, weeping with rage as the Child Sir Lancelot was dragged, insatiate, from the prostrate and howling Child Sir Galahad, after an onslaught delivered the precise instant the curtain began to fall upon the demoralized Pageant. And then—oh, pangs! oh, woman!—she slapped at the ruffian's cheek, as he was led past her by a resentful janitor; and turning, flung her arms around the Child Sir Galahad's neck. Maurice's little white boots and gold tassels had done their work.

At home the late Child Sir Lancelot was consigned to a locked closet—closet pending the arrival of his father. Mr. Schotfield came and, shortly after, there was put into practice an old patriarchal custom. It is a custom of inconceivable antiquity: probably primordial, certainly prehistoric, but still in vogue in some remaining citadels of the ancient simplicities of the republic.

And now, therefore, in the dusk, Penrod leaned against the fence and sighed. It appears that he had at least some shadowy perception of a recent fullness of life, for as he leaned against the fence, gazing upon his wistful Duke, he sighed again and murmured aloud:

"Well, hasn't this been a day!"

But in a little while a star came out, freshly lighted, from the highest part of the sky, and Penrod, looking up, noticed it casually and a little drowsily. He yawned. Then he sighed once more, but not reminiscently; evening had come; the day was over.

It was a sigh of pure ennui.

TOYS MAY COME FROM ENGLAND

Efforts Being Made to Cover Loss of the German Market

From Consular and Trade Reports.

Efforts are being made to prepare for the making in England of wooden toys and small woodenware that before the war came almost exclusively from Germany. It is noted that vast quantities of waste wood are now burned in England with a little judicious outlay might be turned into articles of commerce, and that most of these little things can be made wholly or partially by machinery.

It is suggested that an organization be formed to supply samples and materials to English cottagers, with a view to encouraging them to enter into the manufacture of wooden toys, and to collect and distribute to retailers the finished articles, so as to secure the establishment of a useful rural industry in England. Emphasis has been laid upon the various kinds of toys and articles of wood that are normally exported from Germany to England.

In connection with the steel toys, it is stated that the demand is now so great that British manufacturers are unable to meet it.

WILL GERMANY BAR FOREIGN STUDENTS?

Japanese May Not Be Allowed to Study at German Universities

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 31.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—The question whether in future subjects of nations now at war with Germany shall be allowed to study at German universities has aroused much comment, especially among German medical men and in the professional press. In the Medizinische Klinik, Professor Hirschberg deals with this question insofar as it affects the exclusion of Japanese. He demands that no Japanese shall be allowed to study at German universities. "A similar attitude," he continues, "could not be observed with regard to students of other nationalities now at war with Germany, as many common interests unite these various countries. Professor Hirschberg's opinion is that German medical science would not lose anything if we limit the mutual relations with other now hostile nations and if we after the war restrict these relations to those nations only with whom it will be possible to live in peace."

This article by Professor Hirschberg has brought forth answers from Professor Orth. He points out that he must deny on principle that a nation can isolate itself from the others with regard to scientific, and especially medical, relations. "I do not underrate our German medical science," he said, "but could it have reached its present greatness without the mutual relations with the medical science of other nations? Have we always been the givers, and never the receivers? Shall we, because England has become the best-hated enemy, remove the picture of Lord Lister from the wall of our Lankenbeck hospital? Shall we forego for all future time all relations with the English or any other country's medical science?"

With regard to Japan, Japanese medical science has been till now the receiver. But Japanese diligence, together with German genius, has presented German medicine and the whole world with one of the most valuable medical acquisitions. If after the war a long lasting peace—also with Japan—comes, the way in science could not be continued. The political enemies of today can be the best friends tomorrow. If we wish to maintain our power in the world, for which this war is waged, also after the war, we cannot isolate ourselves but we must remain in touch with the whole world and if the relations are partly interrupted we must restore them.

"That we shall treat the various nations differently is a matter of course. Our present allies will occupy a privileged position. After the termination of the hostilities a certain feeling will remain against our enemies, especially against England, Russia and Japan, and it will take a long time and continual good behavior on their part before the old good relations can be restored. But after the war the relations of our universities with all now hostile foreigners must be again corrected."

MISTER STEPLIVELY

Should a Man Listen To Conventions?

Should a man stick to the conventions? Should he bind himself down to doing only those things which everyone accepts as unquestionably right? Is it all right for him to carry on harmless flirtations with women provided he goes no further than mere flirtations? Here is a group of questions which have been asked for "Eena."

Mrs. Bailey. A killing in a doctor's office naturally is something to arouse interest. When the doctor said he did not know who did the killing and had seen nothing but a man's hand poked through the window, the mystery deepened. Detectives working on the case had to suspect someone. They always do that. They could see nothing.

covered she had killed a woman and not a man.

Celia said she told Mrs. Carman the morning after the murder that "God will forgive anything but murder."

"Do you?" asked Mr. Graham. "I have that God will forget your perjury."

"I know it is wrong to lie," said the girl, "but I did what Mrs. Carman asked me to do."

"You are afraid of going to jail."

with the girls his wife would not have installed the dictagraph and never would have been arrested.

Right Is Folly.

"Warfare between labor and capital is folly. But it will not be settled until public opinion compels considerations of private gain to give way to public welfare."

This is the diagnosis of modern industrial conditions offered by Dr. Earl Kelsey, professor of sociology

Women have been models of good behavior because they had to be. But with men it was different. The man in his office who could nudge his stenographers under their chins or wink at them, was considered a good fellow. Now arises a New York clergyman, who, while he for argument's sake, admitted it may be all right to be a good fellow, at the same time says it is awfully risk.

This clergyman said he believed a man should never indulge in "harmless flirtations" because of the deteriorating effects on his morals. "There is one point all will agree with me on," he said. "From the standpoint of selfishness I would advise men to walk as straight as chalk. Carrying on simple little flirtations will get us in all kinds of trouble. A stolen kiss or undue attentions to a woman on a part of a married man are dangerous."

"A man should be courteous, but not more than courteous," citing the Carman case, which recently attracted the attention of the entire country, the clergyman said.

"It seems that Dr. Carman did nothing wrong. The worst thing about him was his reputation among his friends that he was a devil with the girls. His wife heard of it. Then some one murdered a woman in his office. The detectives decided his wife did it because she was jealous. He had brought this jealousy down on his head and he was forced to go to all kinds of expense just because of a little reputation he had of being a devil with the girls."

The killing of Mrs. Louise Bailey in the office of Dr. Carman is one of the most baffling mysteries of years. The evidence against Mrs. Carman was almost entirely circumstantial. Mrs. Bailey called at Dr. Carman's office one evening and while they were talking, she went to the window, broke the glass and shot ing wrong with Mrs. Bailey's visit. She was unknown to Dr. Carman. Investigations were made to learn if any of her acquaintances wanted her to die. None could be found. In running down a murder mystery detectives first try to find someone with the motive for murder. There seemed to be no motive.

EXPERT DISCOVERS WOMAN HAD RENTED DICTAPHONE.

The detectives finally discovered that Mrs. Carman had rented a dictagraph. That led to the disclosure of the jealousy of his wife. Fearing her husband was not true to her, Mrs. Carman had installed a dictagraph and listened to conversations her husband had with women in his office. He passed the acid test. He was proven to be true and the woman had the instrument removed. Although she discovered Dr. Carman was guilty of no wrong, the fact she had rented a dictagraph was the only clue the detectives had to work on. They decided she had shot the woman out of jealousy.

Working on that slender thread the detectives started to find some evidence to prove the woman guilty. The State wanted a prosecution and the doctor's wife seemed the most plausible victim.

But Mrs. Carman's statements and statements of others in the house stood in the way. She had such a strong alibi that for a time the prosecution despaired of a single bit of evidence. Finally a tramp was found. He said he had seen a woman go to the window and shoot. That was making progress. Dr. Carman had said a man's hand had been thrust through the window.

At the coroner's inquest all the household held firm, but later a negro maid changed her testimony. She said on the witness stand at the Carman trial:

"I am from Charleston, S. C. I went to work at Dr. Carman's May 18, 1914. On the night of June 30 I served dinner at 6:45 o'clock. After dinner I started to wash the dishes. While I was washing the dishes, Elizabeth—Mrs. Carman's daughter—came into the kitchen. Soon afterward Mrs. Carman came in. She was dressed in a kimono and had a white ground her neck. She told Elizabeth to go back into the house. Then Mrs. Carman went out the back door. A minute later I heard a crash of glass and the report of a pistol.

"Mrs. Carman came in the door again. I was standing in the door between the pantry and the kitchen. She said to me, 'What did you hear?' She showed me a pistol in her back pocket. I was afraid to go in and told her not to go into the office. She said she was not going to do anything else. Then I went into the office.

"The body of a white woman was lying on the floor. Mrs. Carman followed me into the office. She stayed there about half a minute and then went out to the washing room. Dr. Carman was there, and so was another man.

"The next morning about daylight Mrs. Carman came to my room. She was dressed in a nightgown. She said, 'Oh, Celia, what did I kill that woman for? I hope God will forgive me. You stick to me and if anything happens to you I'll take care of your little boy.'

"I saw Mrs. Carman later that morning at the breakfast table and she burst into tears. After breakfast she came into the kitchen and told me to forget that I had seen her the night before. Later that day Mrs. Carman came in with her lawyer, Mr. Levy. Mrs. Carman winked at me when he asked me what I knew. I told Mr. Levy that I didn't know anything.

"The day after the murder, Mrs. Carman came into the kitchen and asked me to make a wood fire in the stove, which I did. Later she came downstairs with a bundle of letters and burned them."

"Did you tell the truth at the coroner's inquest?" the District Attorney asked.

"I did not," the witness answered. "The District Attorney threatened the witness over to John J. Graham, Mrs. Carman's counsel, for cross-examination."

Motionless, stolid and absolutely expressionless Mrs. Carman sat perfectly right while her former maid told the damaging story against her. Her lips were tightly drawn and she sat upright in her chair, but she did not blink. She did not look towards the jurors once while the negro girl was talking.

On cross-examination Celia said she never had seen Mrs. Carman wear her kimono downstairs before the night of the murder. She said Mrs. Carman stood in the kitchen for ten or fifteen minutes before she passed out of the back door and that the crash of glass and the shot occurred immediately afterwards.

"Did you know who she meant when she said 'I shot him?'" Mr. Graham asked.

"No, I did not."

Mrs. Carman carried the revolver, the witness said, hidden in the folds of her kimono when she went into the office. Mrs. Carman said nothing to any one, she added. She looked in and went out in about thirty seconds. Mrs. Carman did not express surprise when she discovered she had killed a woman and not a man.

Celia said that when she was being brought from Prospect to Lincoln to go before the Grand Jury, Doctor Carman told her not to change her testimony and that she would take care of her.

Mrs. Carman she continued, gave her a few days after the murder. "That is for keeping your mouth shut," the witness said. Mrs. Carman told her.

TRAMP FAILS TO MAKE IMPRESSION.

The testimony of the tramp, Frank J. Farrell, apparently had little weight with the jury.

Farrell said that he reached the Carman house about 8 o'clock, and, thinking it looked "prosperous," started to cross the lawn to ask for something to eat. He noticed a woman in a dark garment, which he thought was a maid, who was looking out of the window. He started covering her with his hand, and she was talking.

On cross-examination Celia said she never had seen Mrs. Carman wear her kimono downstairs before the night of the murder. She said Mrs. Carman stood in the kitchen for ten or fifteen minutes before she passed out of the back door and that the crash of glass and the shot occurred immediately afterwards.

"Did you know who she meant when she said 'I shot him?'" Mr. Graham asked.

"No, I did not."

Mrs. Carman carried the revolver, the witness said, hidden in the folds of her kimono when she went into the office. Mrs. Carman said nothing to any one, she added. She looked in and went out in about thirty seconds. Mrs. Carman did not express surprise when she discovered she had killed a woman and not a man.

Celia said that when she was being brought from Prospect to Lincoln to go before the Grand Jury, Doctor Carman told her not to change her testimony and that she would take care of her.

Mrs. Carman she continued, gave her a few days after the murder. "That is for keeping your mouth shut," the witness said. Mrs. Carman told her.

TRAMP FAILS TO MAKE IMPRESSION.

Farrell said that he reached the Carman house about 8 o'clock, and, thinking it looked "prosperous," started to cross the lawn to ask for something to eat. He noticed a woman in a dark garment, which he thought was a maid, who was looking out of the window. He started covering her with his hand, and she was talking.

Now it is quite useless to argue a writer with any view to convincing politicians like Mr. Bryan and the whole nation, in question. If they really understand our fellow-countrymen, they know they are right in huddling up China as a world dead, not the modern China, not the China that is changing and moving forward, but old China. In such a case, Americans could frankly be classed themselves with the Chinese. But as it is here, on the other theory, the Chinese are the dead, they feel so fearfully that the Japanese, or some other kind of people that does not, do not, do not, mental and physical inferiority, may suddenly come to rule over us.

I am, however, writing on the assumption that Americans are still not the whole like their forefathers who followed Washington and like their

Australia has done well in this respect. But Switzerland has worked out a comprehensive scheme with practical intelligence. She has not only solved the question of having men ready to fight, but she has solved the question of having arms to give these men. At present England is in more difficulty about arms than about men and some of her people when sent to the front

The training will be given in large bodies. It is essential that men should get accustomed to the policing and sanitary care of camps in which there are masses of soldiers. Moreover, officers are wholly useless in war time unless they are accustomed to handle masses of men in cooperation with one another.

fought one another at Bull Run in 1861. Even the efficiency of the regular army itself was such merely by comparison with the volunteers. I do not believe that any army in the world offered finer material than was offered by the junior officers and enlisted men on Cuban soil in June, 1895, and by the end of the next two weeks probably the average individual infantry or cavalry organization there-in was—at least as good as the average organization of the same size in an old world army. But taking the army as a whole and considering its management from the time it began to assemble at Tampa until the surrender of Santiago, I seriously doubt if it was as efficient as a really good European or Japanese army of half the size. Since the war has made considerable progress, our lift army of occupation that went to Cuba at the time of the

It is a pity that the least of us are prone to as to which no effective method of performance is provided. Furthermore, as we, very serious blunder has been to treat peace as the end instead of righteousness as the end. The greatest soldier patriots of history, Timothy John Handen, Andrew Hofer, Koerber, the great patriot statesman-soldier like Washington, the great patriot statesman like Lincoln, whose achievements for good depended upon the use of soldiers, have all achieved their immortal claim to the gratitude of mankind by what they did in just war. To condemn war in terms which would include the wars these men waged or took part in precisely as they included the most wicked and unjust wars of

I advocate that our preparedness take such shape as to fit us to resist aggression not to encourage us in aggression. I advocate preparedness that will enable us to defend our own shores and defend the Panama Canal and Hawaii and Alaska and prevent the seizure of territory at the expense of any commonwealth of the Western Hemisphere by any military power of the East and Western Hemisphere in the most unadventurous and the most democratic manner possible. We Americans do not realize how fundamentally democratic our army really is. When I served in Cuba, it was under Gen. Sam Young and afterwards of Gen. Adna Chaffee. Both had entered the American army as enlisted men in the Civil war. Later as president I made both of them in succession lieutenant generals and commanders of the army. Cuba they both won the military flag and was appointed to the White house the first time as lieutenant general. General Young sent him his own shoulder strap with a little note saying that it was from Private Young '61 to Private Chaffee '61. Both of the fine old fellows represented the best type of citizen-soldier. Each was simply and sincerely devoted to peace and justice. Each was incapable of advocating our doing wrong to others, neither could have understood willingness on our part of doing wrong to others. The United States submit lamely to insult or injury. Both typified the attitude that we Americans should take in our dealings with foreign countries.

Practice of Football Instills Pluck Into Youths Who Pastime on Gridirons of American Schools

BY HILLY MURPHY.

Everybody is familiar with the so-called Chinese bulb. If you want to study half a dozen different subjects with illustrations better than can be given in books, get one of these bulbs. It costs a few cents and gives more instruction than half the schools throughout the country. In appearance, something like an onion, this little bulb has a flat base and a pointed top. You can carry it in your pocket or leave it on a shelf and it will keep its vitality, because, like a fat man, it can live for a while on its accumulated tissue. To do its best work, this bulb is exactly like young men: it has to have an environment somewhat favorable to its nature.

So must the boys of today, if they are to succeed in life and become men of honesty, integrity, and of high moral character. Give them such surroundings, pastimes and instructions, and our youngsters will unfold like the Chinese bulb does. One day you will notice that it is making a mistake with one of its leaves. Then another morning when you go down to breakfast, you will be aware of a gentle, yet highly attractive fragrance.

Seeing it, you will be led to the bulb and in the glory of the morning sunshine you will discover a perfect life. It is so of youths who have been sent to school where the importance of football is understood. It is the greatest of all games for boys. It is a fiery furnace that tries the souls of youngsters, but it turns out men.

In no other pastime in the world is there that true, hearty, fighting spirit of honesty that football engenders and fosters.

Take, for instance: Two noted teams are fighting fiercely for a victory. One team leads the other. The other team is within one yard of making a score that will give it the lead—maybe a championship. Also in the latter eleven's line of attack. There are four chances and it is one yard to go. But the opposing team holds.

At college where the importance of football is understood, you carry it in your pocket or leave it on a shelf and it will keep its vitality, because, like a fat man, it can live for a while on its accumulated tissue. To do its best work, this bulb is exactly like young men: it has to have an environment somewhat favorable to its nature.

At such schools as Loyola Academy in St. Louis, where they have a splendid football team, your every act is made a preparation for that one yard to go.

FOOTBALL GAME A MAKER OF REAL MEN.

There are plenty of people in this world who always seem sure to do their work fairly well, but they are those who attract little if any attention and are not in any way preparing for those emergencies that arise in the life of everyone, when a man is called upon to quickly get his feet on a slippery surface, to face a foe, or to stand up to a crowd.

That is why football is the greatest of all games and games for that one yard to go. But there are other advantages of the great college game. The practice of it keeps one on his feet. You get right down to the real dirt, and a touch of old terra firma at times is apt to keep you clean mentally and physically. You get away from the "white collar" life. For that if anything else, we should be thankful for football.

The prevailing opinion that boys are sent to school that they may be fitted for positions in which their hands shall not be soiled, is all wrong in the opinion of the writer. Such graduates often get the positions they apply for, too. That is the trouble. It is a sickening sight to see a young American boy who has nothing behind him in the way of money, applying for a position in a lawyer's or banker's office.

The sickening part of it is, that he will probably get the position. He thinks that he is on the road to success as a banker or a lawyer because some of the gray-headed lawyers or bankers of whom he has read, have made their way to success by that route. But times have changed and the chances are against him overwhelmingly.

The plight of a great many boys who study for professions, is almost as bad as that of those who aim to become clerks. Each year an army goes out of the professional schools with degrees in their hands, only to find that there is no place for them. The average income of the professional man in this country is little above that of the dispenser of ditties.

It is not polish that is needed by the young men of today; power is the need. That is what football gives you. Unless there is something beneath polish and education, you are a fraud. No matter what degree you carry, Education should fit a boy for life. The education which does not fit him to take advantage of every opportunity is a fraud. The great work of America is crying out for men who have power in action. Manufacturers declare that they cannot find American-born and trained men to fill the positions which pay the most. The time has come to put an end to the superstition, the obsession of "white collarism." The practice of football will prove a big help in doing it.

SPORT A LEVELER AMONG ALL CLASSES.

As a game, I believe football is far superior to baseball. Not fewer, certainly than a million Americans are these days viewing football games with howls of cheer and exultation. More spectators will gather for the annual combat between Harvard and Yale than ever thronged in to the Stadium at Athens to watch the Olympian games. No indifference of the weather will ever dissolve the fringe of eager on-lookers arrayed about gridiron fields.

The sport is a leveler. Going to the game and sitting, or standing it through, all classes rub elbows familiarly. The modern Chesterfield lifts his faultless hat upon his walking stick with savage huzzas, when his side blocks the foe's advance.

Anaemic clerks and stolid anti-athletes, all root lustily. Most enthusiastic of the crowd are the women, not always comprehending the technique of the game, but with excitement from start to finish of the spectacle. The ethics of the future over football and its popularity has often been made the subject of professional discussion and editorial homily; the psychology more rarely. What is the effect, physical and psychological of the game upon the onlookers? Why do they enjoy it enough in spite of manifold discomforts to keep on attending? Why do many attend, while they do not altogether approve?

The game's the reason. It's worth it all. To live a life time in an hour, to clench fists, wave arms and umbrellas, spring from the bleachers, to be vividly conscious of nervous excitations, started from every ganglion of the vaso-motor system; to experience overflow of the stream of sentiment upon the arid fields of ordinarily cultivated reaction—that is football. The general tone for an afternoon becomes properly a "vibration."

We circle and plunge with the half back; the third shaker us as our little quarterback falls heavily to earth, tackling a powerful runner. Creative imagination is stirred, having no share in the contest, you create one for yourself.

The cheering at a game always has artistic unity, which results from simultaneous stimulation of the creative impulses of a countless "organized" rooting, doubtless as it is generally stated, has little or no effect upon the players themselves; to the rhythmic beat of the balls they roll, through absorption in their duties, to react, but to this truth admitted by neutral players, the simple faith of the football enthusiast gives no credence. He believes that breath somehow helps the ball over.

MINOR MOTIVES THAT INFLUENCE INTEREST.

Though this act of participation is mainly responsible for our attendance at games, various motives influence. The attractiveness of the mob is not to be underestimated. Brilliant flags and banners tossed against the sky and over all a host of swaying pennants; hoots, titters, horseplay, singing, shouting, yelling—all this, apart from the game itself, fascinates.

Then there is the opportunity for the renewal of acquaintances. The college man finds at the game practically all of his own kind. Each big during the intervals between the plays, his mishaps, misdoings, debts and inebriations are forgotten while he chums to old friends or a new acquaintance.

The mob in its quiescent state is highly self-respecting, indeed, abnormally conceited and complacent, just as it is self-forgetting and brutal when aroused.

Besides the natural attractiveness of the crowd, a social fact, that the game, though democratic, shall be attended by those who make pretense of belonging to swell, helps immensely to increase the numbers. To go to the game in an automobile, wearing Persian lamb and laced with chrysanthemums, compresses many a society girl's happiness.

Also all the alien matter sentiment is incarnated in the football crowd. College loyalty is stronger with many graduates and undergraduates than with any other affiliations.

Football is at last beginning to be appreciated, one realizes that when you see how young the boys are who are playing the game to day compared to those of five years ago.

The truth is that sheer physique is having less and less to do with football, and that it has had less to do with it in the past than most of us have been led to believe. Successful football is built upon brains and courage. If the physique is at hand so much the better—but the courage makes a football player and brains and courage make a football team.

Now by courage, I do not mean mere pluck, nerve, call it what you will—but that deeper quality that must be apparent off the field, as well as on; the quality that refuses in sacrifice, when sacrifice is necessary; that makes it possible for the player to "play" just a little more of himself than "you" had a right to expect.

COURAGE AND BRAINS ARE FOOTBALL ASSETS.

Courage and brains make the psychological moment that appears at one time or another in a big game. They are both aggressive and defensive. They carry the fight to the enemy. And at the same time they make possible those magnificent stands in the last ditch, which no season in the game has failed to produce.

Any article on football as a pastime and a developer of men would be incomplete without a comparison of the game with baseball. I am more interested in the college pastime. It may be due to prejudice that I consider football the greatest game of the two.

To me, it is superior for the following reasons:

In the first place in football every man takes part in the play. In baseball this is far from the case. In football there must be absolute harmony of play or all chance of victory is lost.

In baseball it is true that team play is necessary, but, as I have said, it is perfectly possible for a team of star baseball players to do brilliant work independent of any system.

In football, in my humble opinion, there is more room for the use of brains, strategy and downright courage.

Strategy in particular enters into every telling play to a far greater extent than it does in baseball; where mere skill is of the utmost importance. Again, football requires absolutely no implements as a requisite part of the game except a ball.

Every fall there is a great deal of space given in the papers to the dangers of football. Many people seem to have the idea that the man who plays the game is always risking his neck.

There is little justification for this annual crusade. No one who has played the game or knows anything about it, participates in this criticism.

Football is rough, but not dangerous. The people who are responsible for this hostile attitude and general misrepresentation are, in my opinion, persons who do not know the pastime.

Football is a maker of men, and the greatest of all sports.

American Potash.

Talk to the average farmer of the United States about potash, and he knows what you mean. Potash is the basis of his fertilizer. He knows a lot about it.

About a million pounds of potash annually have been imported from Germany, most of it for fertilizer purposes. That supply is now cut off. Fertilizer factories and glass works and pottery works and other industries that use potash are greatly excited thereby.

It so happens that in the kelp beds of the Pacific Coast there is an annual crop capable of producing six times as much potash as the annual imports from Germany.

For the first time statistics on the subject are available. The Bureau of Soils of the Department of Agriculture has just completed an exhaustive inquiry into the subject. This inquiry shows that the kelp of Puget Sound alone would produce one-twentieth of the total supply. The whole coast would supply more than is needed.

The department report on the subject says: "The amount of potassium chloride which can be expected annually from a harvest of the giant kelps can now be estimated with some approach to precision. It is assumed in the estimates here given that the kelp would be cut to an average depth of one fathom, although great depths probably could easily be realized in practice. The average potash content of upward of 100 samples of dried Macrocystis and Nereocystis as determined in the laboratory of the Bureau of Soils is 16.1 per cent, corresponding to about 25 per cent potassium chloride."

In the accompanying table are given estimates for the area, tonnage of fresh kelp, and tonnage of equivalent potassium chloride in the regions so far mapped by the Bureau of Soils. There are probably some seventy square miles of commercially available kelp beds yet to be mapped in Southeast Alaska, which can produce as much as already estimated for that region, and which are included in this table. Assuming also that at least two crops a year of Macrocystis can be harvested on the California coast, we obtain as the totals about 399 square miles of kelp beds, producing annually 59,300,000 tons of fresh kelp, equivalent to 2,266,000 tons of potassium chloride. At the present time the total imports of potash salts of all kinds is about 1,000,000 tons, equivalent to about 4,000,000 tons of pure potassium chloride.

That is to say, the giant kelp of the Pacific coast, harvested to a depth of six feet, could potentially yield an annual output of potassium chloride about six times the equivalent of the potassium salts now imported into the United States. It is hardly to be assumed that any such harvest of kelp is soon, if ultimately, to be realized, but it is practicable, and at least removes definitely any necessary dependence of the United States upon foreign sources of supply for potassium salts.

What it would cost to obtain the pure potassium chloride from kelp cannot be stated, as sufficient experience is not yet accumulated to justify exact estimates. It should be easier to extract the potassium chloride from kelp than from the standard salts. But the cost of harvesting the kelp as well as the subsequent manipulation is, at the present time, speculative. It is easy to show by paper calculations enormous profits in obtaining pure potassium chloride, iodine and possibly other products from the kelp. Since, however, the dried kelp will average more than 25 per cent potassium chloride, the organic matter decomposes very readily and there is present nitrogenous matter equivalent to about 2 per cent nitrogen and some phosphate, it seems probable that this form is the one most likely to develop at first a market for use as a fertilizer, either directly or in mixture with other materials, such as fish scrap and standard phosphate carriers.

Rescinded Order.

He was big and surly, and he entered a quick lunch place and gave his order. Hearing another patron ordering county sausage, he crowded, "Gimmie a plate of that sausage, too." At that moment a leg, which by some unusual chance had slipped into the kitchen, was elected rearward with a kick. It came vent to a few sharp staccato yelps as it went. "Here!" yelled the surly one to his retreating waiter, "but that order for sausage, I didn't know you had to make it."

Taking the Blind Off Justice

A new era in legal procedure is coming. The old days of mysteries of the law will some day be nothing but history and we will wonder how it happened we endured them so long. Even those defenders of our style of legal procedure are ready to grant concessions. They still believe justice is blind and should be kept blindfolded, but to prevent an annihilation of American law they want some measure of legal procedure.

Former President Taft has frequently voiced sentiments similar to this. We must change conditions, he says, to keep from having our entire legal fabric thrown to the winds. Former President Roosevelt two years ago spent considerable of his time emphasizing the need of legal procedure and attacking the present system in four courts.

Only the other day President Wilson came forward with a plea for humanizing the law.

Every State Legislature will do something at its next meeting toward legal procedure reformation, as the President terms it. "Humanizing the Law." Some of the legislation will be negative in its effect. Some legislation may work radical changes.

From ages past justice has been pictured as a stern old lady with a scales in which she weighs out justice. She is blindfolded and cannot see back behind the law. On the morality of justice this old lady stands in lifeless stone. No one can dare question her authority. She does not excuse ignorance of the law. She knows only the law and weighs her decisions accordingly.

At a recent national convention of judges and lawyers, the first meeting of its kind ever held in the United States, a genuine opinion was expressed that the law needed humanizing. The lifeless stone needed to be infused with real life so it could think and not only dispense justice impartially, but with an eye into causes.

The judges of the country are as a general thing able men. They hand down their decisions as they think best. There is something in training, however. A corporation lawyer working for years to defend his corporation gets the point of view of the corporation, and is likely to be human enough to make his de-isions, but they have gained a certain point of view and cannot decide otherwise than they do.

In America our federal judges have powers no other judges have been given. To them is given the right to decide the constitutionality of laws enacted by the Congress. They can nullify any law by declaring it unconstitutional. That has brought down the greatest deluge of criticism.

OPINION OF THE WORLD IS ITS MISTRESS

"The opinion of the world is the mistress of the world; and the processes of international law are the slow processes by which opinion works its will," said President Wilson in his address.

"I would call your attention incidentally to the fact that it does not mean that the opinion of the world is the mistress of the world; and the processes of international law are the slow processes by which opinion works its will," said President Wilson in his address.

Every State Legislature will do something at its next meeting toward legal procedure reformation, as the President terms it. "Humanizing the Law." Some of the legislation will be negative in its effect. Some legislation may work radical changes.

From ages past justice has been pictured as a stern old lady with a scales in which she weighs out justice. She is blindfolded and cannot see back behind the law. On the morality of justice this old lady stands in lifeless stone. No one can dare question her authority. She does not excuse ignorance of the law. She knows only the law and weighs her decisions accordingly.

At a recent national convention of judges and lawyers, the first meeting of its kind ever held in the United States, a genuine opinion was expressed that the law needed humanizing. The lifeless stone needed to be infused with real life so it could think and not only dispense justice impartially, but with an eye into causes.

The judges of the country are as a general thing able men. They hand down their decisions as they think best. There is something in training, however. A corporation lawyer working for years to defend his corporation gets the point of view of the corporation, and is likely to be human enough to make his de-heard in this court, and the standard of judgment is not with regard to the character of the testimony, but the character of the witness. The motives are disclosed, the purposes are conjectured and that opinion is finally accepted which seems to be the best founded in law, perhaps, but the best founded in integrity of character and of morals.

"That is the process which is slowly working its will upon the world, and what we should be watchful of is not so much jealous interests as sound principles of action. The disinterested course always is the biggest course to pursue, and in the long run the most profitable course to pursue. If you can establish your character, you can establish your credit."

"What I wanted to suggest to this association in bidding them very hearty welcome to the city is, whether we sufficiently apply those same ideas to the body of municipal law which we seek to administer. Citations seem to play so much larger role now than principle."

"There was a time when the thoughtful eye of the judge rested upon the changes of social circumstances and almost palpably saw the law arise out of human life. Have because they suffer so terribly in time of war.

"There are three great elements in warfare," Miss Boardman said. "They are physical, mental and moral."

"The physical element includes the suffering of the soldiers at the front. We are getting only meager reports of the suffering from the present war. Yet we know men are being literally torn to pieces by thousands."

"Some are slowly dying from wounds or from being left alone on the battlefield. Others are almost starving. And still others are suffering from the complete exhaustion of being constantly under fire, making long marches and having little food and water."

We got to a time when the only way to change law is by justice. The changing of law by statute seems to me like mending a rudder with a patch, whereas we should mend by the life that is in it, not by the life that is outside of it.

"I should like to think that the law did not derive its impulse from looking forward or then from looking backward or rather that it did not derive its instruction from looking about and seeing what the circumstances of men actually are and what the impulses of justice necessarily are."

MORAL JUDGMENTS OF MASSES MARK PROGRESS

"Understand me, gentlemen. I am not venturing in this presence to impeach the law. For the present, by the force of circumstances, I am in part the embodiment of the law, and it would be very awkward to disavow myself. But I do wish to make this intimation, that in this time of world change, in this time when we are going to find out just how, in what places, to what extent the real facts of human life and the real moral judgment of mankind prevail, it is worth while looking inside our municipal law and asking whether the moral judgments of mankind are made square with every one of the judgments of the law itself."

"For I believe that we are custodians, not of commands, but of a spirit. We are custodians of the spirit of righteousness, of the spirit of equal-handed justice, of the spirit of hope which believes in the perfectibility of human life itself."

"Public life, that private life, would be very dull and dry if it were not for this belief in the essential beauty of the human spirit and the belief that the human spirit could be translated into action and into ordinance. You cannot go any faster than you can advance the average moral judgments of the masses."

"I have dealt with all sorts and conditions of men, and I have found that the name of moral judgment burned just as brightly in the mind of humble life and limited experience as in the scholar and the man of affairs. And I would like his voice always to be heard, not as a witness, not as speaking in his own case, but as if he were the voice of men in general, in our courts of justice, as well as the voice of the lawyers, remembering what the law has been."

"My hope is that, being stirred to the depths by the extraordinary circumstances of the time in which we live, we may recover from those depths something of a renewal of that vision of the law with which men may be supposed to have started out in the old days of the calendar, who communed with the intimations of divinity."

"Lawyers are slow to agree on law reforms. They would go slow and their reasons for going at all are the demands of the mass of the people. The lawyers are educated to their way of thinking and naturally continue to think as they are taught. Former President Taft is an example of the lawyer who would not change the law deliberately. He was a Judge before Roosevelt pulled him into the lime-care net, what. Perhaps a soldier sees a relative or his most intimate friend shot beside him. Revenge is his only thought.

"Instantly his manhood is gone. He is nothing but a brute. He will kill anybody. This is why some great soldier who has a wife and home at home whom he almost worships will lay down a baby in the enemy's country. It is why another will gouge out the eyes of an opposing soldier who is wounded and defenseless on the field."

"Even during the Civil War in this country, when there was no law hatred and many other factors active in this war were lacking, there were atrocities. They cannot be prevented."

light and made a Governor of the Philippines and later a President out of him.

In reply to President Wilson's suggestion for more of justice in each case, Mr. Taft told the judges that uniformity in decisions was quite as important as individual justice.

Turning to the improvement of cases, he urged that most cases in the trial courts should be disposed of at the end of arguments.

Justice McReynolds, in urging the judges to become greater affirmative forces in the enforcement of the law, said delays in courts frequently robbed cases of the fruits of the decision.

As Attorney General the Justice said he started out with the idea that he would conduct the Government's business as that of a private agent. He soon found he was mistaken by that, and became convinced the thing to do was to give the public a fair idea of what he intended to do and a judicious notion of what success was being attempted as he proceeded.

In some way, he added, the judges must give to the people an idea of what they are seeking to accomplish and how they are succeeding.

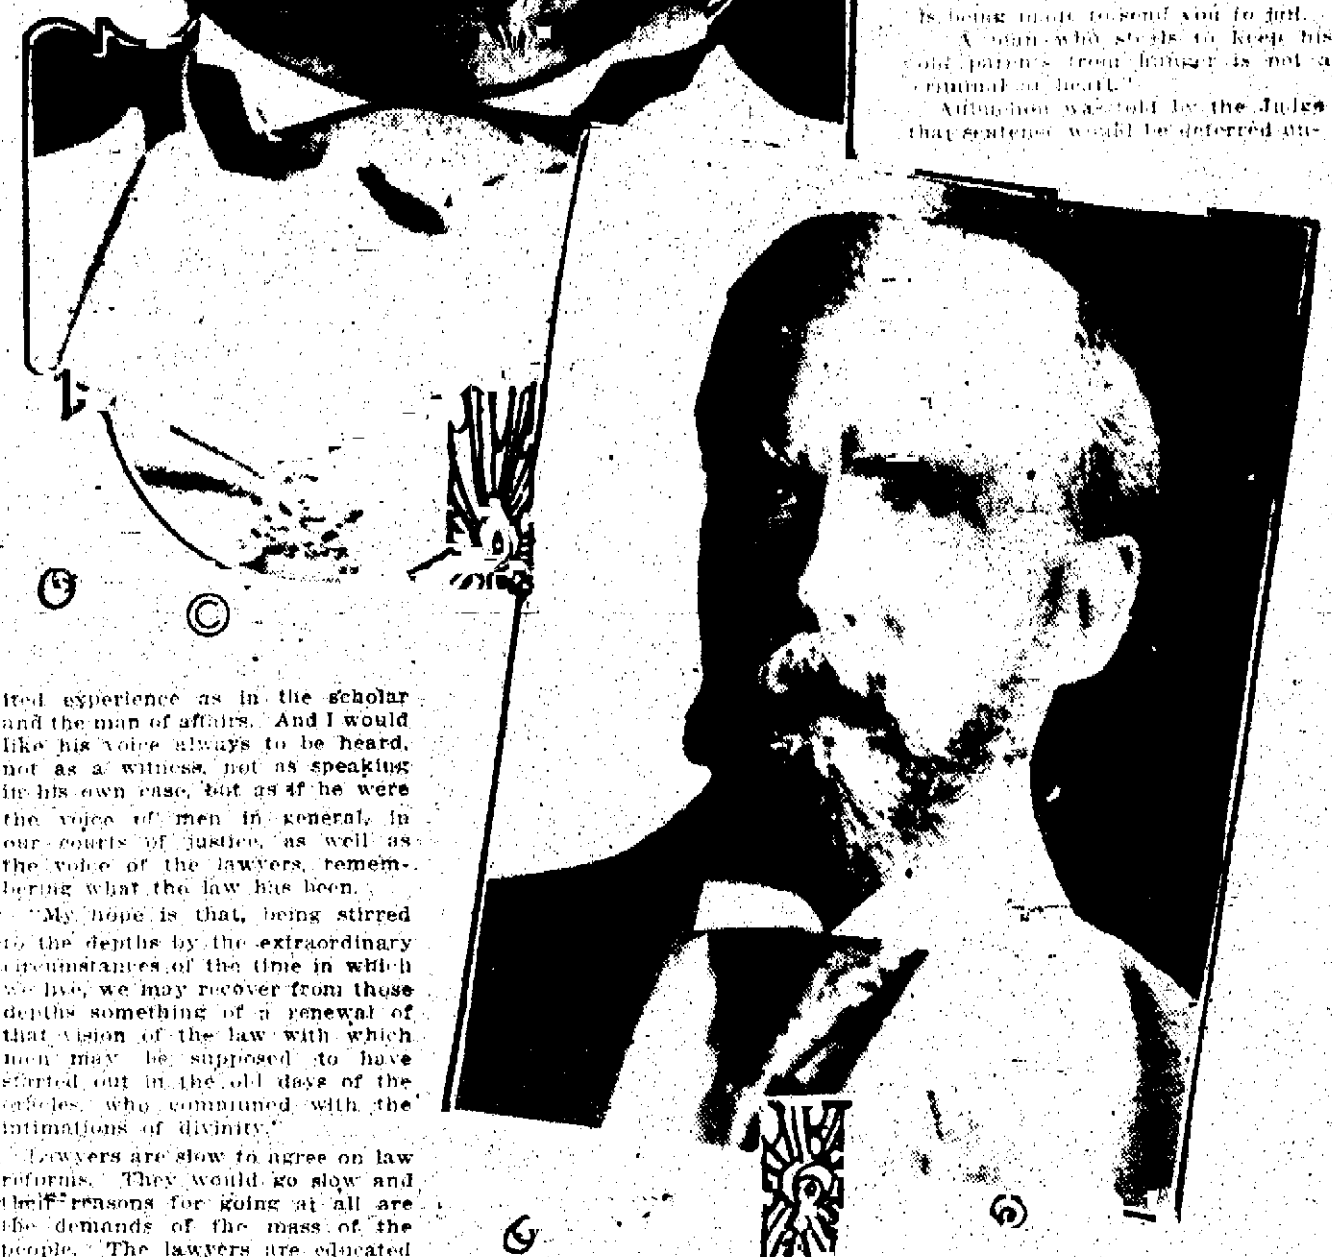

"In some such way we may turn the tide of opposition to the judiciary of the last ten years," he concluded, "and find ourselves once more entrenched in the confidence of the people."

Although the courts are not human there is a growing tendency of the part of judges to listen to more than the law. It is a long cry from the days of Brutus, who sentenced his old sons in Rome, to a United States District Judge who was called on to sentence a young man by the name of Joseph Aufuehon, who stole three small pigs or hogs from a train in interstate shipment.

"He stole the railroad," the judge said to him, "the clamoring populace would send you to Congress. Instead, for stealing three pieces of bacon from a railroad car he has to be sent to jail."

A man who steals to keep his own parents from hunger is not a criminal at heart."

Aufuehon was told by the judge that sentence would be deferred un-the judiciary, Mr. Taft suggested that dependence on the stenographer in the present day had led to much delay in the disposition of the March term of court. If he believes well in the meantime and supports his father and mother, he will be freed of the charge.

"The Red Cross president has left Manchester for Washington to take charge of getting ready for shipment the vast amount of medical supplies which are needed in every country at war."

"Thousands and thousands of yards of bandages are being sent, as are immense quantities of other supplies."

"Of course, one can say what one likes, but it is not the same as seeing it."

NATIONS MUST ABIDE BY ARBITRATION DECISIONS BEFORE THEY ARE OF VALUE, SAYS RED CROSS OFFICIAL

Former President Taft has the right idea—arbitration will never be successful until men are willing to submit their differences to arbitration, even if they lose. Miss Mabel Boardman, head of the American Red Cross.

"Individuals submit their legal differences to law courts," she added. "They hate to lose, but abide by the decisions. Nations can do the same thing."

"Women have pronounced ideas of war. They can do a great deal in bringing about this new sentiment and insist that men must make every kind of a just sacrifice in order to end war. When they take such a stand their position is one that cannot be criticized and one that must count."

"It is a hard task to take. It is easy when your own country is not involved."

"American women now say that the present war in Europe is outrageous, that it ought to stop at once, that it is almost unthinkable that such a state of affairs should exist in this advanced stage of civilization."

"But what would these same women say if the United States were one of the warring powers? Are the American people capable of passing judgment in the present crisis?"

Miss Boardman does not think the women of the world can bring about the change in individual sentiment alone; yet they are and always will be tremendously interested because they suffer so terribly in time of war.

"There are three great elements in warfare," Miss Boardman said. "They are physical, mental and moral."

"The physical element includes the suffering of the soldiers at the front. We are getting only meager reports of the suffering from the present war. Yet we know men are being literally torn to pieces by thousands."

"Some are slowly dying from wounds or from being left alone on the battlefield. Others are almost starving. And still others are suffering from the complete exhaustion of being constantly under fire, making long marches and having little food and water."

"The greater part of the mental suffering is done by the women left at home. They know not whether their loved ones are alive, dead or wounded, and if wounded, how seriously, or how much they may be suffering."

"The moral side of war has been little dwelt upon. This is the making of brutes out of them. We hear of fearful atrocities in the present conflict. There has never been a war in history where there have not been the same atrocities."

"The reason is the moral change that comes over some of the most mild-mannered men in the world, become nothing but brutes in war."
